Deere, no!

Tournament canceled, casualty of coronavirus pandemic

The Buzz

College golf also felt the pain

As much as individuals couldn't play, and then only in twosomes, and that the pro tours shut their doors from mid-March onward, the same thing happened in college golf.

Evan as institutions moved to online learning – Zoom became a student staple from youngsters on – players on college teams couldn't play or practice, especially in Illinois, where one couldn't even tiptoe onto a range to spank a Spalding.

"I think most of the guys are doing fine with the online learning, but what was really frustrating for the last month was the inability to get out on the golf course and play," DePaul men's coach Marty Schiene told the school's sports website. "Now that it is opened up I think the team as a whole is much happier."

The Blue Demons had finished in the top three of the testing Big East five of the last six years, and were hoping to challenge for the title and an automatic NCAA Championship berth again. Now, they have to wait until 2021 to make the big show, where Mike Small's Illinois squad annually contends.

Schiene may have a secret weapon: a Russian.

"I think (incoming freshman) Artemiy Yalovenko will have an immediate impact on the team. Winners are winners, he won in the United States at an AJGA event in Colorado, he won the Russian junior four times and he won the Russian amateur championship."

PRE-PANDEMIC PLAY Die-hard golfers played Marovitz – Waveland to old-timers – in the snow on March 16, before the stay-at-home order was made.

Bill Berger moved their Saturday morning Golfers on Golf radio gabfest down the dial to WCPT-AM (820). It runs from 10-11 a.m. ... The return of The Scorecard on WSCR-AM (670), with new co-host Barry Cronin, materialized at 6 a.m. on June 6, with Mike Esposito the sidekick. Previous co-host Dave Schuster of the station's staff was laid off, among the many media victims of plummeting ad revenues because of the pandemic. The Spears trio is at the WCPT studio, whereas Esposito and Cronin work from their homes.

The Grill Room by Tim Cronin

Riding out an invisible storm

The news came as a bit of a surprise, even though logic shouted that the cancellation of the John Deere Classic, 2020 edition, was more and more inevitable.

How can you have a golf tournament with 156 players, an equal number of caddies, and somewhere around 1,000 volunteers, if you can't have more than 50 people in a group? That's the regulation in Phase 4 of Illinois's plan to return to normal. And Phase 4 is where Illinois – especially the Quad Cities area – moves into on Fri., June 26. Barring a reversal – and only the virus is in control – it will be in effect when the Deere's mid-July dates roll around.

Even if you could have all the players and caddies and volunteers – ShotLink doesn't run itself, my friends – how do you handle spectators? Fifty per hole? Fifty per green? Fifty total?

Oh, and figure out how to give each player six feet of distance in a locker room that's barely bigger than a large family room. Not happening.

All that and more convinced Deere tournament director Clair Peterson, his volunteer board of directors, and sponsor Deere & Company, that there was no way to stage the 50th edition of the Deere this summer without regular galleries.

That's the kicker, that number. Not having more than 50 means the 50th can't happen this year.

Any number of fun things were planned. A celebration in downtown Moline the night before. Past winners being invited to hang out and bask in the glory of winning the big show in the little metropolis. (Peterson, a Green Bay Packers fan, beams when he's told the Deere is the Packers of the PGA Tour. And it is.)

The celebration will be held next year, when the 50th Deere is held 50 years after the first one. (Hey, that works.) A commemorative book will be published. Banners will fly, trumpets will sound, and Dylan Frittelli, the duration champion from 2019, will step to the first tee and attempt to defend his crown.

We hope. Medical science by then should have come up with a vaccine so everyone can go somewhere without a mask and not be afraid to shake a hand.

The Deere – and at least some of the millions the Birdies for Charity wing of the tournament annually raises – is the most notable golf casualty of the pandemic, though those day workers, from cooks to starters, whose pockets are empty might argue the point. Everyone has lost money from this, and hopefully, has not lost their health.

Meanwhile, from Silvis to southern Illinois, public golfers and private club members have to deal with restrictions. We've gone from walking twosomes to foursomes riding in as many carts, and in Phase 4, caddies will be able to tote a bag.

It was strange, these last few months, to drive through a town at night and be the only car at the corner, waiting for the light to change. It was stranger to crest the hill and see maybe one other car on the highway for four miles. Fri., May 29, with restaurants allowed to seat at least a few people outside for dinner and a libation, seemed closer to normal than anything in more than two months.

Likewise, golf. Finally, one could hit balls on the range, and buy a sleeve of balls in the pro shop. Some day, maybe in July, maybe in August, the ball will be allowed to fall to the bottom of the cup. That's among the benefits of Phase 5.

The Deere hasn't been the only competitive casualty. The CDGA killed off the Illinois Amateur and the CDGA Championship for the first time since World War II. The WGA and WWGA scuttled their junior championships, weeks that have identified future champions for generations. The IJGA played out of state. The Illinois PGA's players have yet to strike a ball in anger, though the Illinois Open has been rejiggered for one course with a handful of qualifiers. Perhaps that's the light at tunnel's end. Wish them luck.

With this issue, we return to a regular monthly schedule – we hope. The coronavirus caused a disruption in every golf association's schedule, and then a computer glitch nearly scuttled our April issue covering the reopening of golf in the state in Phase 2. The Phase 4 guidelines for return to play, which take effect June 26, are covered in depth on page 10.

Mistwood owner cast long shadow

BY TIM CRONIN

Jim McWethy knew what he was getting into when he took sole control of Mistwood Golf Club.

What he didn't know was how deep he was getting into golf's business side.

Before his revitalization program at the Romeoville course was finished, he'd spent $6 million on remodeling the golf course and building a performance center, and nearly twice more on a sumptuous clubhouse that replaced the original, a dump that appeared to have been built upside-down. While he was at it, he took over a rundown golf dome a few miles away and made it the most modern in the country.

McWethy did this not only because he loved golf, but because his business instincts saw an opportunity to make a go of it. He was right. Mistwood went from afterthought to success, with excellent playing conditions, an unparalleled staff, and delicious food. McWethy's Tavern, the restaurant in the clubhouse, was the best dining in Romeoville and several towns beyond.

McWethy died Mon., June 22, victim of a rare lung disease. He was 76.

He had taken up golf as a kid, growing up in Palos Heights near the Navajo Fields Country Club, property which is now Trinity Christian College. He never lost the love for the game, and that brought him to become an investor in the then-new Mistwood Golf Club in Romeoville in 1998. It struggled to gain an audience until McWethy bought it outright from a second group of partners in 2003.

McWethy's total investment in Mistwood was estimated at $16 million, with $10 million sunk into the clubhouse.

Asked by ILLINOIS GOLFER in 2012 why he did so at a time when others were retrenching, McWethy said, "I do believe it can be a successful venture, but I also realize I'm running counter to almost everybody else in the golf business.

"It's a big roll. I do not expect it's going to be paying handsome rewards. I just want rewards for it."

McWethy graduated from Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa in 1965, and never forgot his alma mater. The Berry Center there is named after his grandfather, whose bearings distribution company grew into the world's largest before its sale.

McWethy invested in everything from software to a blueberry farm. Rarely did he meet with anything but success.

In 2009, he called himself "technically retired." Anyone who knew him knew that was a bunch of hooey. Mistwood was a perfect example. During the remodeling of the course, he was as interested in the type of rock that would make up the facing of the bridges near the clubhouse as he was the type of grass architect Ray Hearn and superintendent Ben Kelnhofer were selecting for the fairways and greens.

In 2012, he took over the old Ditka Golf Dome in Bolingbrook, refurbished it, named it McQs and then the Mistwood Golf Dome. It boasts the first TopTracer ball-tracking system in any dome, and a new shell.

McWethy was also a member of Chicago Golf Club.

McWethy is survived by his wife Susan, grown children Todd and Gretchen, and a legion of friends. Services are pending.

ILLINOIS GOLFER COVER STORY

50TH JOHN DEERE CLASSIC

A tournament delayed, not denied

Birdies for Charity component to continue, even without birdies rolling in

BY TIM CRONIN

Call the decision wrenching, but also call it obvious once every option was considered.

That's how tournament director Clair Peterson views the decision to cancel this year's John Deere Classic, the PGA Tour competition that puts the Quad Cities in the national spotlight each July.

There was the footprint of TPC Deere Run in Silvis, which has a clubhouse barely big enough for a tournament in regular times, and one too small for safe distancing in a pandemic.

There was the health factor. Deere & Company, the tournament sponsor since 1999, is in the forefront of testing its employees and using work-at-home for those in its world headquarters in Moline.

There was the fan factor. Peterson saw local companies that usually buy a corporate package beg off, because their customers didn't want to chance mingling with strangers.

Add it up, and it became obvious that going ahead with the Deere – and celebrating the 50th anniversary – in a pandemic was a no-go.

"It led to a tough decision, but in the long run, I think it's one that made sense," Peterson said.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

WAIT 'TIL NEXT YEAR Deere & Company's outdoor showroom is close to the ninth hole.

"I look at people saying, 'Yeah, it's outdoors, it's maybe the easiest sport ever.' I think it's the hardest sport," he told WQAD-TV. "You've got 156 different people coming in from all over the place, along with 156 caddies, as opposed to a basketball team or a baseball team that travels together and stays together. This is a whole different deal. In the locker room they were demanding six feet of clearance around every player. We don't have a locker room the size to take care of that. So we were going to have to do some kind of other solution for that."

Peterson read through the 37-page pandemic play plan created by the PGA Tour, and kept finding speed bumps to playing, if not outright roadblocks.

“We were going to have to set up a MASH unit to do testing, and a quarantine solution if someone tested positive,” Peterson said. “We were supposed to find one hotel where everyone was supposed to stay inside the bubble and eat.”

Even standard on-course operations were going to be affected.

“Evac – something that you wouldn’t even think about, taking players off the course in a weather delay, which happens all the time in July,” Peterson said. “You can’t do it in SUVs. They don’t want everyone in close proximity. So we were going to have to get 80 new carts, in addition to the fleet we already had, in order to evacuate people off the property.”

The list went on and on, and so did conversations, until it became evident that even if everything on the list could be achieved, the Deere would be played before a handful of fans compared to the usual turnout. Given the Birdies for Charity operation depends on attendance revenue to help fund the bonus that the tournament hands out each year, Peterson and the tournament board, in conjunction with Deere, decided to punch the pause button for 2020.

All the anniversary celebration activities slated for this year will be held in 2021 instead in conjunction with what will still be the 50th renewal of the tournament that started at Crow Valley in Bettendorf in 1971.

“It is going to be epic,” Peterson said.

As for Birdies, which awarded a record $13.82 million in 2019, it continues, with a twist.

“The biggest change is, for donors who in the past have made penny pledges based on the number of birdies scored in the tournament, obviously, we won’t be doing that this year,” said Birdies for Charity director Kristy Ketcham Jackson. “Those are generally equal to about $20 per penny pledge. We’re converting all of those to $20 per penny pledged.”

Said Peterson, “Thanks to John Deere’s ongoing support, we are able to promise a five percent bonus even though we are not having the tournament.”

The Deere was supposed to be the first PGA Tour weekend with spectators, following four weekends with tournament play before only television viewers. Instead, the PGA Tour scrambled and added a second tournament at Muirfield Village Golf Club in Dublin, Ohio, the week before Muirfield hosts The Memorial.

Ohio is at approximately the same place in its business status, and will allow a limited number of spectators at The Memorial.

July 9-12 were the dates for the 50th Deere, which started in 1971 as the Quad Cities Open and had several sponsors, including Hardee’s and Miller beer, as well as a few years fronted by television celebrity Ed McMahon, before Deere saved the tournament and became title sponsor in 1999. Now, the 50th Deere, with the hoopla, including a commemorative book, will be played 50 years exactly after the inaugural took place at Crow Valley. Dylan Frittelli will still be the defending champion.

“We understand and respect that the Quad Cities market has dynamics and challenges that prevent the playing of the John Deere Classic in 2020,” PGA Tour competitions chief Andy Pazder said. “I have no doubt the event will return stronger than ever in its 50th playing in 2021.”

“Our top priority is the health and well-being of players, fans, volunteers and support staff of the John Deere Classic,” Mara Downing, Deere’s VP of global brand and communication, said in a release. “We know this announcement will come as a disappointment to the Quad City area and to the broader golf community. We look forward to celebrating the 50th playing of the tournament in 2021.”

Plans were for the tournament to contact ticket holders for this year to arrange refunds.

The next large spectator tournament in the state that could be affected is the BMW Championship, set for Aug. 27-30 at Olympia Fields Country Club. That tournament – the Western Open under its original name – had already been pushed back a week.

It’s expected that the BMW will have no more than 4,000 spectators a day at Olympia Fields.

WGA, WWGA juniors among tournaments lost to pandemic

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES
REPORTING FROM GLENVIEW

National junior golf tournaments are unique in their organizational challenges. Many dealings are with the parents, rather than the players. Mom and Dad foot the bill for their children's play.

Add in the complications from the COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic, and officials from the Western Golf Association and Women's Western Golf Association realized that it would be impossible to stage their respective junior championships – the oldest for boys and girls in the land – with anything close to a representative field.

Thus came the joint announcement on May 11 that neither the Western Junior nor the Women's Western Junior would be played this year.

There was no option to move the affairs into the fall, as so many other tournaments have done, since school takes up that portion of the calendar.

"We're obviously very disappointed that we won't be able to conduct our two world-class golf junior championships, the Western Junior and the Women's Western Junior, in 2020, but we feel strongly this is the right decision under these challenging circumstances," said Vince Pellegrino, WGA senior vice president of tournaments. "Our foremost priority is the health and safety of all those who would have been involved, including players, their families, the club's members and staff and our tournament officials."

Jackie Wacker, Women's Western Junior tournament chairman, said canceling the tournament was a difficult but necessary decision.

Western Golf Association

ONE AND DONE Thanks to the pandemic, Gabriella Gilrowski won't be able to defend Women's Western Junior title. A 17-year-old last year at Woodland Country Club, she'll be 19 in 2021 and a year too old to play.

"We waited as long as possible to see if there might be significant improvement in the resolution of the ongoing and unprecedented health crisis we are facing," Wacker said.

"However, we ultimately decided the risk is just too great to have so many young girls and their families travel – many from long distances – to compete. We hope and trust all involved will understand we are doing this out of our care and concern for the welfare of our players and everyone who would be on hand to support them."

The Chicago District Golf Association, citing health and the difficulty in conducting qualifying, cancelled the Illinois Amateur and CDGA Championship, its two biggest tournaments, on May 15.

"We continue to rely on the guidance of international, national and local health organizations and administrators, as well as the golf operational restrictions set by the state of Illinois, when it comes to making decisions on our events," CDGA executive director Robert Markionni said.

"Based on the current information from these entities, we do not think it is feasible to begin safely conducting qualifiers for these events in late May and early June at the standard we are accustomed to, thus unfortunately necessitating the cancellation of these prestigious events."

Finally, the Illinois Women's GA and the CWDGA canceled their championships, set for Pine Meadow and Medinah No. 2, respectively.

Salvaging a schedule

Illinois PGA reworks slate, saves all four majors

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES
REPORTING FROM GLENVIEW

During the last two months the Illinois PGA has been working to reschedule and reformat its tournament schedule for the 2020 season due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Despite having to reduce the number of events, this season will still feature all four major championships, all three national qualifying events, five stroke play events and three pro-am events.

The majors – the 71st Illinois Open, Illinois PGA Championship, Illinois PGA Match Play Championship and Illinois PGA Players Championship – all remain on the schedule and serve as the section's four marquee competitions.

“We worked diligently over the past few months with our board, officers and tournament committee to develop a tournament schedule that was both safe for participants while preserving the major championships and other key events,” said executive director Carrie Williams. “We’d like to thank all of the PGA professionals and facilities for their dedication and flexibility to help us create our new 2020 tournament schedule.”

As previously announced, the 71st Illinois Open has been restructured to a field of 156 players and will be held on Aug. 3-5 at White Eagle

Golf Club in Naperville.

The section's schedule usually runs from early April through October, but the pandemic caused major upheaval. The team competitions and senior play has gone by the wayside, but it's remarkable that so much has been salvaged.

It begins July 6 with a one-day stroke play at

The Hawk Country Club in St. Charles, the first of five such competitions. Others are July 20 at Riverside Golf Club, July 27 at Onwentsia Club in Lake Forest, Aug. 17 at a course to be determined, and Sept. 15 at Elgin Country Club.

That one serves a second purpose. This year, the IPGA's Match Play begins with a qualifying round, and that Elgin date is it. The top 64 move on to the knockout competition, which runs through Sept. 18.

The Illinois PGA Professional Championship will be held on Aug. 24-26 on Medinah Country Club's Course No. 1. This also serves as the qualifier for the 54th PGA Professional Championship. The top nine finishers will qualify.

The Illinois PGA Players Championship, held for most of the last two decades at Eagle Ridge in Galena, will also feature some changes. The event is set to take place on Oct. 5-6 at Conway Farms Golf Club and will be an invitational event for the top 35 players in the Bernardi Player of the Year Points race. (Eagle Ridge, incidentally, has moved from the Illinois PGA to the Iowa PGA section, the ownership citing the closeness of so many fellow Iowa section clubs to Galena.)

The Illinois PGA Assistant Professional Championship and Illinois PGA Senior Professional Championship will also serve qualifiers for national PGA tournaments.

Making a run for the border

IJGA scheduled tournaments in Indiana, Wisconsin

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES

REPORTING FROM LEMONT

There are no home games for tournament operators, but the Illinois Junior Golf Association took things to an extreme during the first phases of the pandemic.

Unable to play tournaments in Illinois even after golf courses were reopened on May 1, the IJGA craftily used its other brand – the Mid-America Junior Golf Tour – to allow Illinois youths to tee it up in competition.

Call it a stroke of genius by the youth golf body. About 60 boys played in each tournament of a series that began in Kenosha, Wis., on June 8, and the overwhelming majority were Illinois residents. The same ratio held for the girls, though the field was half the size.

The MAJGT tour continues, but the move to Phase 4 allows the IJGA to play within the state as well. Registration reopened on June 25.

Two days earlier, executive director Matt Wennmaker wrote members and their parents, “In order to provide a safe tournament environment for our players and staff, we will be running a condensed schedule for the remainder of the season. The IJGA staff and Board of Directors altered the schedule to include similar amounts of playing opportunities for all ages and skill levels.

Makray Memorial Golf Club

GRACIOUS HOST Makray Memorial is the traditional host of the Illinois Junior Amateur.

All qualifiers for the Chick Evans Junior Amateur will be cancelled and more event and invitation criteria will be released next week.”

Except for the Illinois Junior, slated for Makray Memorial Golf Club in Barrington on Aug. 11-13, fields will be limited to 90 players.

In order to stay within the COVID-19 guidelines, the usual array of multiple tournaments per day has been cut to two, to allow two staffers at each site.

“After running events in Wisconsin and Indiana, we feel this is a comfortable number to adequately abide by the guidelines and policies that we have put forth,” Wennmaker explained.

“We have been working with our host facilities in Illinois over the last week to confirm that they are still able to host our event.

“The IJGA staff and board of directors sincerely appreciate your cooperation with us these last couple of months. We are very excited to be back providing junior golf opportunities in Illinois!”

Playing in a pandemic

Phase 4 golf is close to what we know and love

BY TIM CRONIN

Slowly, almost ploddingly, but so far safely, golf is returning to normal.

Friday's move to Phase 4 in Illinois – not only for golf but most of the rest of society – will bring the game and the business associated with it to as close to pre-pandemic times as we have had.

The big changes are in the state-supplied graphic to the right. It's back to two players to a cart – wearing masks – back to full use of practice ranges, back to caddies at private clubs, and back to business in the clubhouse. Indoor golf ranges can also reopen.

Groups are limited to 50, but that's up from 10, and you can go inside to have lunch, presuming the course has arranged the furniture properly.

There have been many who have thought the return to normal – or close to it – too slow. The “get back to work” crowd began making noise, using that phrase, in April, while cases of the COVID-19 coronavirus were still rising in Illinois. That was premature at the least and selfish at the most.

Now, however, while other states are reversing course, Illinois is opening back up, carefully.

GOLF CLUBS AND MANAGEMENT

i. Minimum guidelines

1. Groups must be spaced in tee times intervals so as to limit congregation before, during and after the round.
2. Signage describing operational changes including: no congregating in groups larger than 50, increased frequency of cleaning, no handshakes, and maintain social distancing between players.
3. Driving ranges, practice ranges, chipping greens, and putting greens are permitted. Golfers should remain a minimum six feet apart when within each other in these areas.
4. Dual-rider Motorized golf carts and pull carts are permitted. If two people who do not live in the same household share a cart, they should both wear face coverings while in the cart. Golf courses shall sanitize each cart after each use.
5. Individual caddies are permitted. Caddies should wear face coverings when within six feet of a golfer or caddie. The golf club should have updated parental consent for all caddies under 18. Caddies should not congregate in groups larger than 50.
6. Proshops may reopen so long as they comply with the Retail Guidelines.
7. Beverage carts are permissible.
8. Hand sanitizer and soap should be present in all restrooms, including those on the course. Restrooms should be sanitized regularly.
9. Locker rooms and showers should be configured with signage, tape, and other markings to ensure members can maintain 6-ft. of social distance.

Illinois Department of Commerce

THE FINE PRINT The main Illinois-dictated rules for players and courses in Phase 4 of the COVID-19 era.

You'll still have to wear a mask around people, especially indoors, and stay at least six feet from others, but that's easy on a golf course. You'll be able to hit balls again, roll practice putts, and otherwise warm up.

You won't be able to get a drink from a water fountain on a course, but the halfway houses should be opening again, the drink cart will be rolling, and, if we read the rules correctly, the restrooms will be open as well.

Tournament play will return, both for the scramble you may be playing in and for the larger state groups – Illinois PGA, CDGA, IJGA – and the national organizations, namely the WGA and WWGA.

You'll also be able to take a lesson again, albeit one socially distanced. Consult your local pro for how he or she is going about their business.

If this goes well, Illinois could move to Phase 5 in about a month.

AROUND ILLINOIS

A virtual Little People's

Venerable Quincy showcase put off in person until 2021; long-distance substitute instead

BY TIM CRONIN

Nan Ryan knew she was in a jam. How could you play the Little People's Championships, the junior golf tournament she started in Quincy in 1974, one that brings players from 3 to 18 and their parents from across the country and various points around the world to the Western Illinois city each year, in a pandemic?

You couldn't. At least, not in the conventional manner of tournament golf, with everyone on the same course on the same day.

But Ryan had an idea.

That was not a surprise. Ryan has had many ideas, and turned them into reality, over the years. As Nan Berry, she played high-level tournament golf and then worked for the PGA of America as associate editor of PGA Magazine, later doing PR for the LPGA before marrying, returning to Quincy, and plunging headlong into creating the Little People's showcase.

Why not a virtual tournament?

"We are focusing on giving our players something to be excited about – an opportunity to compete during these difficult times – right in their own back yards," Ryan said. "We are sad that we won't be seeing all our friends and new families in Quincy this year, but the safety of the players, families, volunteers, and golf staffs is our number one priority.

Little People's Championship

"We hope that our players and their families are as excited about this virtual event as all of us at Little People's are," Ryan said. "We are deeply appreciative of the support that junior golfers and their families, both nationally and internationally, have given us over the past 46 years of Pepsi Little People's, and we want to continue the tradition of one of the most prestigious and friendly junior golf tournaments in the world."

Hundreds signed up, play beginning on June 18. While the face-to-face competition wasn't there, there was a carrot available for the winners of the oldest groups.

“We are delighted that The American Junior Golf Association (AJGA) has agreed to award the winners of the 16-18 boys and girls divisions in this virtual event an exemption for one tournament, the tournament yet to be named,” Ryan said.

Ryan, a member of the Illinois Golf Hall of Fame on her stewardship of the Little People’s Championships alone – the committee didn’t know of her background in the game as Nan Ryan – knows a little about golf history. She may even know of the Tom Morris Trophy Tournament, conducted in the early years of the 20th century by the Western Golf Association along the same lines.

Players from clubs across the country would play on Old Tom’s birthday, then telegraph their scores to the WGA office. The quartet’s scores would be matched against their club’s par and the winner would be the best combined score against par. The Morris competition lasted until fingers were pointed at a couple of clubs with suspicious totals, and that was that.

Surely the kids of today will be better behaved in that regard than their forebears.

Wee-Ma-Tuk saved by member group

It’s hard to find on the map – and as a private club, not listed in our public course directory – but Wee-Ma-Tuk Hills Country Club in Cuba is loved by those who play it.

Lately, there haven’t been enough lovers to guarantee the continued existence of the central Illinois club. Wayne Dermott hopes the formation of a 132-person group that recently bought the club will make that happen.

“The group was founded over a year ago with one goal in mind – save the course,” Dermott told the Peoria Journal Star.

It’s the second ownership change for Wee-Ma-Tuk in the last five years. The extended Bill Kemper family bought it in 2015, and tried to make a go of it, but found a financial bunker. Dermott thinks 132 people pulling in the same direction will have better success than four.

“We have hired a seasoned greens-keeper who will revitalize those 18 holes,” said Mark Cornell, interim director for the company, “with an added focus on the greens, in order to put together a plan on how to restore our golf course.”

The 6,845-yard course plays to a par of 72.

Crab Orchard on the block this fall

Steve Heckel wants to sleep in.

At 74, you can’t blame him. The owner of Crab Orchard Golf Club in Carterville has put the course up for auction.

“I tell people I’m working on my third retirement, but I’ve been here 52 years,” Heckel told The Southern Illinoisan. “I want to get some downtime.”

The grind of 13-hour days can take its toll on the young, much less the old, especially when the next day off is in November.

“I’ve done it all my life, but it’s time for me to be able to do something else,” Heckel said.

Crab Orchard, which opened in 1959, is between the Interstate 57 exit to Marion and Carbondale. It has been in the family, at least in part, since the 1960s. His three children, including a daughter who works there, weren’t interested in ownership, so to the auction block the course has gone.

The buyer would get the 145-acre course, unbuilt residential lots, a condominium and a four-bedroom home on the property.

They would also get a place that feels like home.

“We’ve always been family friendly and beginner-friendly, kind of centered around that atmosphere, as opposed to the country club atmosphere,” said Sarah Haas, director of competitions and junior golf.

The course has survived a pair of tornadoes and a derecho in 2009 that took out 300 trees, many of them planted by Heckel and his family decades earlier.

The auction, which runs online through Oct. 28 at www.trophypa.com, could be cut short if a buyer pops up with an offer to Heckel’s liking.

“Hopefully, it will be sold before its auctioned,” Heckel told KFVS-TV. “There’s some prospects here and we hope it remains a golf course for the community.”

Heckel thinks the course will be in a perfect spot to capture ancillary business from a proposed casino and water park in Walker’s Bluff, five miles away.

Local Knowledge?

The Pro Golf Now website recently picked Elgin native “Wild” Bill Mehlhorn as the best golfer born in Illinois. It calls him the player with the third most wins on the PGA Tour (20) without a major, failing to realize Mehlhorn’s win in the 1924 Western Open came when it was a major.

ILLINOIS GOLFER has no idea whether or not the PGN brigade looked at the careers of Belleville’s Bob Goalby or Woodson’s Jerry Barber, each of whom won majors – the Masters and the PGA Championship respectively – in the 1960s. But the hunch is they don’t even know of Centralia’s Nancy Scranton, who captured the 1991 duMaurier Classic, a.k.a. the Canadian Women’s Open, when it was an LPGA major.

Peter Longo Facebook page

IRREPLACEABLE Peter Longo, who died May 28, was more than a trick-shot artist.

Peter Longo mourned by his many friends

BY TIM CRONIN

The golf community lost one of his most versatile people when Peter Longo died May 28 after a long battle with cancer.

A PGA Life Member, Longo was best known as a trick-shot artist, someone who could tee up a ball on a pencil and smack it 250 yards. But he was much more than that.

He was a fine teacher, a leader in teaching disabled golfers, including disabled veterans, created the PGA's first teaching video for them, and ran clinics throughout the world to spread the word that golf could be fun.

He spent two years on the PGA Tour, and was a regular on WGN-TV's Sunday night sportscast. Longo is survived by his wife Sarah.
