Calumet next on sales block

Pssst.

What, again?

Yes, again.

This time, Calumet Country Club is on the block. Host of this year's Illinois Amateur, and with a large number of new members, the balance sheet of the private club in Homewood still shows red, in part because the new members are mostly not equity members, but paying month-to-month for access.

Those in charge hope any potential buyer wants to keep Calumet open, but that may be difficult in practice if a big bid comes along, because of its location.

The layout, which dates to 1920 and was designed by Donald Ross, is hard by the Tri-State Tollway, which caused the reworking of about a dozen holes by Larry Packard and Brent Wadsworth in Ross' style when the bulldozers came through in the 1950s. An off-ramp to Western Avenue, which borders the east side of the club, makes for an ideal light-industry site, should a potential developer consider petitioning the village of Homewood for a zoning change.

Calumet was formed in 1901, its original course close to the site of Chicago State University. Development prompted its move to the suburbs, but close to the Illinois Central Railroad for easy access.

If it closed, Calumet would be the second south suburban club to do so in short order. Lansing Country

Calumet has a lively history, highlighted by being the site of the seventh of Byron Nelson's 11 straight victories in 1945. Nelson returned 50 years later and displayed a remarkable recall of the circumstances and the people involved.

AMAZON REBUFFED AGAIN: River Forest Country Club's members are sticking to their guns. After turning down a $60 million offer for their property from Amazon Corp., which seeks a distribution site near O'Hare, the members turned down an even more lucrative offer, ILLINOIS GOLFER has learned.

The lengthened shadow of one woman

Ralph Waldo Emerson, a plus-1 philosopher, said that any institution is the lengthened shadow of one man. Emerson was on his game after the Age of Enlightenment, but before the Age of Equality. Today, he would undoubtedly write of the lengthened shadow of one person, which would ruin the meter of the phrase but encompass all.

It would take in Carol McCue, for instance. When news of her death reached us, thoughts of the many times our paths crossed filled our mind, beginning with the first, at Balmoral Woods during a revival of the Chicago Open.

This was a one-shot affair, and Carol was merely observing. John Randall invited Carol because she was a friend and because she knew all worth knowing about golf, from the organization of it to the playing of it and to the joy and pathos it could elicit in the souls of those who played it.

Her unquestioned lengthened shadow is the Chicago District Golf Association of today.

In 1942, when she walked into the CDGA office in the original LaSalle Hotel, she was 19, the one picked out of a pool by someone at the Royal Typewriter Company's placement service. The CDGA needed someone to work in the office after the death of Joe Davis, the sage who was the CDGA's first executive secretary from 1926 until a few weeks before Carol arrived.

The qualifications were simple. Carol could, having been trained at Royal, type and take dictation. A tennis player, she was unfamiliar with golf.

Chicago District Golf Association

MASTERS CHARTER Carol McCue with Augusta National's Clifford Roberts in 1959.

She would become familiar with golf. Immediately, she was plunged headlong into the planning of the biggest week in CDGA history – then, and perhaps even now – the Hale America National Open, the wartime expansion of the fledgling Chicago Open into a temporary replacement for the United States Open itself.

There could be no hotter baptism by fire than dealing with everyone from Joe Dey, the boss of the United States Golf Association, to the leading pros of the day, from Ben Hogan to Byron Nelson, to drawing-card celebrity Bob Hope, the biggest name in radio and movies.

The many on the committees helped, but Carol was at the center of it all.

The Hale America came off without a hitch. Carol stayed.

"I started at $22.50 a week, and was glad to get it," she told Len Ziehm in 2004.

A quick learner, Carol took the CDGA from the quill pen to computerization, the latter critical for handicap work, previously done by hand. She saw the evolution of the association from all private clubs to an all-welcoming group, public and private, black and white. When she began, the mimeograph machine was the duplication method of choice, short of going to a printer. When she retired from two decades with Jemsek Golf, following her CDGA tenure, postcards with tee times to competitors were being replaced by e-mail blasts.

Nobody else in Illinois golf covered that arc of the game's evolution. She was not only there, but pushed the CDGA, and the game, forward.

Her funeral on Friday, Dec. 29 was attended by about two dozen close friends, many made in golf.

Her final resting place is Calvary Cemetery in Evanston, a few miles from the Evanston Golf Club in Skokie where she was a member. Even at Calvary, golf is represented. The first monument on the right as you enter is for the Mulligan family.

CAROL MCCUE • 1923-2017

The trailblazing innovator

BY TIM CRONIN

Carol McCue was the First Lady of Chicago Golf.

She knew everyone in the game on a first-name basis and was a part of the game for over 70 years.

McCue died on Tuesday, Dec. 19, at 94, after a period of declining health.

She walked into the Chicago District Golf Association office early in 1942, soon after the death of Joe Davis, the CDGA's executive secretary, to fill in and help coordinate the Hale America National Open at Ridgemoor Country Club. Just out of business school at age 19, she stayed 40 years, becoming one of the leading administrators in the world of golf, first as executive secretary and then with the new title of executive director.

She is believed to have been the first woman to do so outside an all-female golf association.

"The people involved in golf are very, very nice people," McCue said in a 1989 interview with the Chicago Tribune's Reid Hanley. "When you work in golf you meet people on their best terms."

Nobody ever had a bad word to say about Carol McCue, because there were only good things to say.

She was the last living member of the inaugural class of the Illinois Golf Hall of Fame, one of the eight gaining entry in 1989. A decade earlier, she was awarded the National Golf Foundation's Herb Graffis Award, named after a Chicago golf writer, one of the first people she met in the game.

"She was the gold standard for golf administrators, a great boss, mentor and friend," said Dennis Davenport, who succeeded her as the CDGA's executive director. "Dick Taylor, who helped found Golf World, often called her the Grand Dame of Golf."

McCue, crediting the Royal Typewriter Company's placement service to leading her to the CDGA, led the group into computerized handicapping in 1967 – eliminating the time-consuming need for people to travel to each club, check scores and calculate them individually for hours on end – long before the United States Golf Association did so.

She called on her friendship with Bob Jones in 1958 to create the CDGA's Masters charter, which allowed several hundred members to take in the beauty of Augusta National for one day each April for decades. Soon, CDGA charters for golf outings were going everywhere in the world. Those continue to take place.

She helped lead the association, which started as a group of private clubs, into public golf, helping spread the word for the game in general. She wrote a manual on how to run a golf tournament – calling players to the tee before their tee time, long standard procedure, was a McCue innovation – and was a charter member of the Golf Writers' Association of America.

In 1969, a McCue idea led to the formation of the International Association of Golf Administrators, a think tank that had led to countless improvements in how golf is run. A decade later, she was awarded the National Golf Foundation's Herb Graffis Award, named after a Chicago golf writer and an NGF founder who was one of the first people she met in the game.

"It was a temporary job for the summer. Nobody ever told me I had a full-time job here. They just kept giving me more work to do." – Carol McCue on getting hired Always crediting the volunteer directors from area courses, McCue would say, "I'm just a hired hand" when someone credited her with an innovation.

But someone had to organize it, and McCue was a great organizer and innovator, leading the CDGA to a position of prominence among regional associations.

"We are deeply saddened to hear of Carol's passing," said CDGA executive director Robert Markionni. "She was a true pioneer and leader in golf administration, not only in Chicago, but throughout the nation. Many of the programs that Carol initiated, such as public golfer memberships and computerized handicapping, revolutionized golf administration and set the stage for the innovative technology we use today. Even though she is no longer with us, Carol's legacy will live on for many years because of her innovative work."

The pros of the Illinois PGA thought so highly of her, that group made her an honorary member in 1962, a first for a woman for any PGA section.

Her retirement from the CDGA in 1982 was short-lived. Joe Jemsek soon hired her as a vice-president of Jemsek Golf in charge of publicity. She coordinated Cog Hill's hosting of the 1989 U.S. Public Links Championship. Soon after, Cog Hill landed the Western Open for a run of nearly two decades, and McCue was the ideal person to work with the Western Golf Association and PGA Tour. She worked for Jemsek Golf for 20 years.

A believer in getting youth into the game, she helped start the Cog Hill Sizzler in 1988, which soon took up two of Cog's four courses for a day in August, the place overflowing with young golfers.

Twenty years before, she suggested the shuttered Edgewater Golf Club be reopened as a junior-only course run by a charitable foundation. People cheered the idea, but nobody made it happen.

McCue was a tennis player when she was hired by the CDGA, but took up golf, in part to learn about the game she was working in, and became a 10 handicap at Evanston Golf Club. The par-3 seventh at Evanston was one of her favorite holes, because she scored a hole-in-one on it.

Her contacts were legendary. She became a friend of Herbert Warren Wind, America's most erudite golf writer, and after Wind's retirement, they would chat after each major championship. She also advised Wind and his partners on their "Classics of Golf" book reissue series.

She was also generous, especially with her time. She volunteered to help run the Daily Southtown Challenge Junior Championship at Glenwoodie Golf Course – which she convinced this reporter to start in 1989 – until she no longer drove. One year she had to be convinced that it was better for her to be inside the air-conditioned clubhouse rather than at the unshaded scoreboard when the temperature climbed to 100 degrees.

To celebrate her commitment to the Challenge, organizers named the first-prize award for the girls championship the Carol McCue Trophy. She blushed.

Services were held Dec. 29.

Roger Packard broke through China's wall

BY TIM CRONIN

The son of a noted architect, Chicagoan Roger Packard followed in father Larry's footsteps, and while he wasn't as prolific, he found a niche in a foreign land.

Roger Packard died Oct. 14 in Palm Harbor, Fla., at 70, not far from the famed Innisbrook Resort designed by his father. It was the first project Roger worked on after joining his father's design operation, but he quickly became known for his own designs, including the Cantigny in Winfield, Prairie Bluff in Lockport, the Eagle Ridge Resort in Galena – with the final course, the General, created with the assistance of two-time U.S. Open champion Andy North, as was Prairie Vista in downstate Bloomington and Trappers Turn in Wisconsin – and a series of courses in mainland China.

It was there that Packard spent most of the last 15 years, remodeling Shanghai Silport Golf Club and creating other layouts, including three courses at the Empark Grand Hotel in Tengchong.

"I suppose it feels more like home than anywhere else," he told Don Shell of GolfTime in 2016. "I think I've turned Chinese."

REPORTING FROM GLENVIEW

Seventeen times now, hundreds have gathered in a posh ballroom to celebrate the best of golf in Illinois.

This time was just a bit different. In the previous 16 induction ceremonies for the Illinois Golf Hall of Fame, those being honored have come from all wings of the sport. There have been players and architects and reporters and superintendents and clubmakers and administrators.

On Oct. 27, all three honorees were exemplary players.

Start with Horton Smith, among whose accomplishments was winning the first and third Masters Tournaments while associated with Oak Park Country Club.

Then consider Gary Hallberg, the Barrington-raised stylist who compiled a stellar amateur career and went on to multiple PGA Tour titles.

Finally, here's Gary Groh, whose lone PGA Tour title came at the expense of multiple World Golf Hall of Famers, including challenger Arnold Palmer, and then dominated the local golf scene for close to 20 years.

Not a bad three-ball.

Smith, who died in 1963, was vouched for by Scott Early, an Oak Park member who sits on the club's Heritage Committee and was a longtime advocate of the club's former professional joining the state golf Valhalla. In doing so, Smith joins former Oak Park pro Errie Ball and members Ray Anderson and John Gleason, both of whom were active behind the scenes in Chicago's golf scene.

At 22, Smith won seven times in five months and was put on the Ryder Cup team in 1929, and captured 13 titles worldwide before the spring of 1930. (Tiger Woods won 14 times worldwide in his first three years.) Smith, the only player to beat Bobby Jones in the year of Jones' Grand Slam, won 13 times, 40.6 percent of his Tour titles, while living in Oak Park.

His career total of 28 individual titles and four in team play rank him 15th in PGA Tour history.

"Some people have asked us that while he accomplished a lot of incredible things, he was born in Missouri and spent a lot of his life in Detroit," Early said. "All that is true. But we embrace him and adopt him. And not just for his golf achievements, but for his integrity."

Deeply involved in PGA of America affairs, Smith served as the group's president in 1952-54, during which time the tour, led by Smith's sponsoring three blacks, one of which was Joe Louis, the boxing champion who was also an accomplished golfer, to play in the San Diego Open, began a long, slow move toward integration. He also pushed for continuing education by professionals, and that effort was honored by the introduction of the Horton Smith Award.

"To put that (1952 sponsorship) in perspective, that's four years after President Truman integrated the United States military," Early said. "That's two years before the Supreme Court, in Brown vs. the Board of Education, said separate but equal is not in the United States Constitution.

"As president of the PGA, he took a stance and sponsored three black Americans to play in the San Diego Open. That speaks to me of mountains of personal integrity."

Hallberg, a two-time winner of both the Illinois Amateur (1978-79) and Illinois Open (1977, 1982), flashed onto the leader board with a victory in the 1976 Western Junior. Success followed success nationally: a Walker Cup berth in 1977, back-to-back wins in the North and South Amateur, the 1979 NCAA title, and the first four-time first-team All-American in golf at Wake Forest.

Locally, he studded his amateur career with the 1977 Illinois Open victory and had a 4-0 record in the Radix Cup, with membership on the second and third amateur teams to win. Hallberg scored three victories on the PGA Tour, losing twice in sudden-death playoffs, and has one Champions Tour victory to date.

"I can't believe I'm standing here," Hallberg

said, crediting his parents for getting him into the game and encouraging him early on. “It was really a privilege to be a golfer. I was so excited to be there (as a youth). I had desire, and it was not a burden for me to hit balls all day long. I just loved it.

“Golf is like many things in life. A lot of times, I wanted to quit. Like bogeying my last five holes to lose a little junior tournament, and I wanted to quit. My dad would say, ‘Turn the page. Tomorrow’s another day.’”

Hallberg always came back for more, and it led to a Hall of Fame career.

“It’s nice to be appreciated,” Hallberg said.

Groh was 30 when he won the 1975 Hawaiian Open in his fifth season on the PGA Tour. But he soon decided to find a club job and reserve his competitive golf for Mondays. That led to a posting at Bob O Link for 36 seasons and a remarkable run of success on the Illinois PGA circuit. Groh won the 1994 Illinois Open, an Illinois PGA Match Play title and four Illinois PGA Championships, the last in 2002, when he was 57.

He captured 15 Illinois Senior majors from 1995 through 2004. He had a 10-3-2 record in the Radix Cup and was undefeated from 1986 through 1999.

“My goal was just to get a little better,” said Groh of his early days in the game, when he tagged along with his father, who pulled a cart with his own clubs, and Gary hanging on.

“That’s what my whole career was, to try to get better. In my senior year of high school, I got to play in the Michigan state high school championship. I won the tournament, and I threw the trophy in the car and I got to thinking, ‘I kind of like this. I wonder if there’s a future in this?’”

There was. He was fortunate to work for Craig Wood, a U.S. Open and Masters winner, while at a club in the Bahamas.

“I idolized what he did,” Groh said. “He got to work at 9:30, have a bloody Mary, he’d read the newspaper, then he’d have lunch with the boys, play golf and go home at 4:30 in the afternoon. That’s not a bad deal!”

Conversely, Groh worked hard on his game and hit the jackpot in Hawaii, but said he eventually “was stuck in a rut.

“The job at Bob O Link opened up, and it couldn’t have been a better fit for me,” Groh said. “I’ve made some great friends in my career here at Bob O Link. It couldn’t have been better.”

Nominations for the 2019 class have opened. For details, go to www.illinoisgolfhof.com.

It was a battle, but Cog Hill's PGA Junior League team came away with seventh place in the sixth PGA Junior League Championship, held at Grayhawk Golf Club in Scottsdale, Ariz., on Nov. 17-19.

The Cog Hill team, relabeled Team Illinois for the proceedings, scored a 7-5 victory over a team from Atkinson, N.H. to finish seventh. A Cog Hill squad had finished last in the eight-team tournament in 2016 and didn't want to repeat that feat.

They received scant air time on the Golf Channel special that ran two weeks later, but they were as pleased as the team from Duluth, Ga., which beat a team from Hillsborough, N.J., 6.5-5.5 in the championship match.

The Cog Hill team: Juney Bai, Jack DiTrani, Emily Duan, Jack Inabnit, Stefan Ink, Aaron Kim, Paulius Malcius, Brody McCarthy, Conan Pan and Joey Sluzas. Cog Hill professional Kevin Weeks was the team captain for the second straight year, assisted by Clayton Pendergraft.

Cog Hill had opened by dropping an 8-4 decision to New Jersey and lost 7-5 to Texas on the first day, then fell 8-4 to Arkansas on the second day to go into the showdown with the New Hampshire team for seventh, and pulled off the victory.

Georgia romped through its matches against New Hampshire, Ohio and California to advance to the final. The kids from Duluth led 3.5-0.5 early and stayed in front throughout.

This is the second title for a Georgia-based team (Atlanta in 2013).

Georgia's trio of William Love, Harris Barth, Lucas Jinglov earned a conceded birdie on the par-5 18th to seal a half-point, and clinch the match. Moments later, their Georgia teammates rushed the green.

Deere charity record: $12 million

Tournament raises $32.72 per Quad Cities resident; over $93 million since founding

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES

The John Deere Classic charity machine has done it again.

Tournament officials announced Oct. 31 that the 2017 John Deere Classic helped raise a record $12.27 million for 521 local and regional charities participating in the Birdies for Charity Program, ranking it among the top three in charitable giving on the PGA Tour.

The 2017 total exceeds by more than $1.73 million the previous record of $10.54 million set just last year, tournament officials said Friday at a news conference at John Deere World Headquarters.

There was more good news from the tournament office: The overall total includes a 10 percent bonus to all charities on amounts pledged and collected on their behalf up to $1 million.

"Everyone associated with the John Deere Classic is extremely proud and appreciative of the individual donors, companies, and family foundations that stepped up to make this year's charitable contribution by far the largest in tournament history," said John Deere Classic tournament director Clair Peterson.

John Deere Classic officials also gave away a two-year lease on a Lexus NX – courtesy of Lexus of the Quad Cities – to one of six finalists who guessed the exact number of birdies recorded this year – 1,918. Each of the six received a key, and the person whose key started the car won it. The winner was Connie Dowsett of Moline.

The free Lexus NX lease program annually serves as an incentive to potential donors to participate in the Birdies program. Lexus of the Quad Cities also provided courtesy cars for John Deere Classic contestants and on-course evacuation vehicles.

"Birdies for Charity is extremely grateful that Lexus of the Quad Cities has made such a strong commitment to the John Deere Classic and to the hundreds of charities we serve in the Quad Cities and neighboring communities," said Birdies for Charity director Kristy Ketcham-Jackson. "The opportunity for Birdies for Charity donors to win a two-year lease on a Lexus NX added an extra element of fun and excitement to the pledge drive and to tournament week itself."

The $12.27 million total works out to $32.72 for each of the Quad Cities' 375,000 residents, making the John Deere Classic No. 1 in per capita giving on the PGA Tour, a distinction it has held for many years.

Since the Quad Cities-based tournament began in 1971, it has helped raise a total of $93.57 million for charity, 99.5 percent of which ($93.04 million) has come since John Deere assumed the title sponsorship in 1998.

The total amount donated to the charities is the result of an efficient three-pronged fundraising effort:

- The tournament's Birdies for Charity program enables individuals, companies, and foundations to pledge to a charity or charities of their choice either a minimum of one cent for each birdie recorded at the tournament from Wednesday-Sunday or in lump sum donations.

- Because John Deere underwrites the administrative costs of the Birdies program, 100 percent of each Birdies pledge collected goes to the core mission of the designated charities rather than to administrative, operational, or fundraising activities.

- The Bonus Fund consists of tournament revenues, direct donations, the John Deere Foundation matching grant, and proceeds from special events, such as this year's Cole Swindell concert during tournament week. Each year, the John Deere Classic promises a minimum bonus of five percent with the understanding that a larger bonus will be paid, if possible.

After Monday's news conference, officials distributed checks to charity representatives who attended the event. For the second consecutive year, three lucky charities in attendance also received an extra $1,000 each in a blind drawing. Checks will be mailed to charities that did not pick them up in person.

Bryson DeChambeau, at 23, became the 21st player in tournament history to win his first PGA Tour event at the John Deere Classic. He finished at 18-under par 266 with rounds of 66-65-70-65, including a 30 on the back nine on Sunday and a successful final putt of 14 feet on the 18th hole to win by a stroke.

Small wins Senior PGA pro of year

Edges Milwaukee pro Jim Schuman by barely 14 points for national honor

BY TIM CRONIN

Mike Small's trophy case is a bit more crowded.

The University of Illinois men's golf coach won the year-long competition of PGA of America senior player of the year in his second year of eligibility, adding that bauble to his three PGA professional player of the year awards.

The only Illinois PGA member to win either honor, Small earned 940.73 points, edging Jim Schuman, the PGA Director of Instruction at Blue Mound Golf and Country Club in Wauwatosa, Wisconsin (926.5) by 14.23 points.

Small gained the lion's share of his points with a pair of top-5 finishes in the PGA's two premier member championships. He shared third in the PGA Professional Championship and tied for fourth in the Senior PGA Professional Championship. He also finished 42nd in the U.S. Senior Open.

And he did it as a part-time player. Small has routinely passed up tournament play when coaching the Fighting Illini in the spring and fall.

"My schedule has always been dictated by my coaching, and when I get the chance to play, it is a bonus," Small said. "I'm a coach first, a the year awards. Small won the former title in 2006, 2007 and 2010.

Jeff Roth of Farmington, New Mexico, the 1993 PGA professional champion, finished third (615); and Todd McCorkle of Birmingham, Alabama, was fourth (592.5).

Bandon suit spills over to KemperSports

A recently-settled suit charging the former general manager of Bandon Dunes Golf Resort and parent company KemperSports with sexual assault, harassment and discrimination, has brought forth similar allegations against the executive staff of the Chicago-based parent company.

In a Sept. 15 deposition supporting former Bandon employee Darla Hamblin's complaint against former Bandon general manager Henry Hickox, former home office executive Adrienne Fitzgerald alleged sexual harassment, unwanted touching and threats at various times by Hickox, company president Josh Lesnik and executive vice president Gary Binder before leaving the company of her own accord in April.

KemperSports announced an independent investigator had been hired with free rein to question anyone with the company. Sources familiar with the situation say an interview request by the investigator hired had been turned down by Fitzgerald, with Lesnik disputing the allegations against him.

Hamblin's $501,000 suit against Hickox and KemperSports was settled a few days before the Nov. 14 trial was supposed to begin in Oregon circuit court. The terms of the settlement have not been made public.

Bandon Dunes, in Bandon, Ore., on the Pacific shore, is owned by Chicagoan Mike Keiser and has been managed by KemperSports since it opened in 1999, as are his other public golf properties. Josh Lesnik was Bandon's first general manager. Hickox had worked for Bandon until his 2016 retirement.

Who wants to volunteer?

The Senior Players Championship at Exmoor Country Club needs volunteers to make the tournament – the first visit of the senior major to Chicago – run without a hitch.

The Western Golf Association, which is running the affair, is recruiting more than 1,000 volunteers for the tournament, set for July 9-15 at Exmoor in Highland Park.

Volunteers in 20 categories perform key tasks inside and outside the ropes during tournament week, including serving as marshals, standard bearers, assisting with player and VIP transportation and helping welcome thousands of patrons to Exmoor during the championship. Information on the tasks to be delegated is at www.cspgolf.com. Click on the 2018 event tab and then the "Volunteers" tab. Choice positions such as course marshal often fill quickly, so don't delay.

"The Constellation Senior Players Championship could not take place without the dedication and enthusiasm of hundreds of volunteers," said Vince Pellegrino, WGA Senior Vice President of Tournaments. "The Constellation Senior Players at Exmoor Country Club will offer a rewarding, exciting week for all involved – the players, spectators and our many volunteers."

Volunteers must be at least 16 years old and commit to work at least three shifts during tournament week. Shifts range from 4-6 hours in length, depending on assignment.

Volunteers are asked to purchase a volunteer package for $75. Valued at $353, the package includes two Peter Millar golf shirts, a hat or visor, a commemorative pin, four one-day tournament round grounds tickets, the volunteer's credential, an invitation to the volunteer appreciation party, and food and beverage vouchers.

The tournament is one of the five majors on the 50-and-up tour, with 78 of the top players vying for the win, as well as a spot in the 2019 Players Championship. Former champions include Jay Haas, Fred Couples and Bernhard Langer.

It's the first senior men's major in the Chicago area since 1997, when the U.S. Senior Open was played at Olympia Fields Country Club.

Exmoor is one of the more storied clubs in the greater Chicago area, with a history dating back to 1896. The club was one of 11 charter clubs that established the WGA in 1899 and is one of just seven WGA founding clubs remaining.

The WGA-supported Evans Scholars Foundation has been selected as a primary beneficiary.

Additionally, recruiting volunteers continues for the inaugural U.S. Senior Women's Open, slated for the same week at Chicago Golf Club in Wheaton.

USGA officials are in need of between 700 and 1,000 helpers for their first women's senior pro championship. Detailed information is at www.usga.org /content/usga/home-page/championships/2018/u-s--senior-women-s-open/volunteers.html.

The volunteer apparel package is $85, and includes jacket, shirt, hat, water bottle, pin and access to the volunteer tent for food and drink.

People

Curtis Tyrrell has left Medinah Country Club to become the grounds boss at Bonita Bay Club, a five-course facility in Bonita Springs, Fla., near Naples. Three of the five are being renovated. Tyrrell, having overseen the renovations of Medinah No. 1 and No. 2, is the man for that.

Cantigny scores national player development award

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES

Cantigny Golf in Wheaton, a national leader in junior golf, has won the 2017 Player Development Award of the National Golf Course Owners Association.

Cantigny has long been at the forefront of player development with their Youth Links – a nine-hole course open only to youngsters – and developmental programs including youth clinics that reached more than 1,500 young golfers in 2017, plus an innovative Young Executive Program that introduces golf to millennials. It has accounted for over 700 rounds since starting in 2016.

Cantigny Golf is also a leading participant in KemperSports' annual #PDWeek celebration in which KemperSports properties from across the country deliver free 15-minute lessons to new golfers. It introduced the game to more than 10,000 new and returning golfers in 2017. KemperSports has managed Cantigny for the McCormick Foundation since 2014.

"We are extremely proud of our team at Cantigny Golf for this tremendous honor," says KemperSports CEO Steve Skinner. "Their commitment to the future of the game and the best interest of their community is a reminder of the outstanding benefits that the game of golf instills."

The honor follows two of Cantigny's leaders being honored by the Illinois PGA. Head professional Patrick Lynch received the Player Development Award and instructor Greg Baresel received the Youth Player Development Award.
