Lake Bluff is on the clock

Lake Bluff is one of the more affluent communities in Illinois. The per-capita income was estimated at $73,735 in 2016 by city-data.com, but the little town of about 5,700 on the lakeshore just north of Lake Forest can't afford to run its municipal golf course.

The park district is asking those who want to see Lake Bluff Golf Club remain open to raise $265,000 by Oct 31, with half of that sum to be in cash and the rest due on Jan. 2, 2019. That would guarantee the course would stay open in 2019.

It's not a ransom note, but it might as well be.

Ron Salski, the park district's executive director, doesn't say the course would close if the money isn't raised, noting the park district's board would decide what to do. His hope is that a successful fund-raising drive – headed by the Lake Bluff Community Golf Association, a recently-formed group – would convince the board the course has a future, despite the declining play that has affected almost all courses.

"If all of this comes together, then the board can start to look at how they want to approach the future," Salski told The Lake Forester.

There are 21 public courses within 10 miles of Lake Bluff, several of which have undergone renovations in the last few years, including nearby Deerpath, Lake Forest's municipal course, and soon-to-reopen Sunset Valley, the municipal gem in Highland Park. Lake Bluff just repainted the clubhouse, but that's nothing compared to the estimated $5.4 million expected to be needed over the next dozen years for operations and improvements.

Add in what is now an annual deficit to the cost of running the district, and officials are looking for relief.

Billy Casper Golf is running the course under a contract that ends Jan. 31, 2019. The park district wants someone to step forward on a long-term lease, paying an annual fee while covering all expenses. At the moment, the park district is responsible for maintenance.

OLYMPIA FIELDS MEMBER CHARGED WITH ARSON: Jacob Bourassa of Chicago and Kurt Altrichter of St. Paul, Minn., were charged with felony arson after setting fire to over $3,000 of wicker furniture in a fire pit on the patio of Olympia Fields Country Club in Olympia Fields, Cook County prosecutors said.

Bourassa, 25, invited Altrichter, 26 and a friend since college, to play Olympia the week of June 2, but at dinner outdoors things got out of hand, and they began throwing wicker furniture into an outdoor fire pit, prosecutors said.

It is believed liquor was involved.

Club personnel saw the action and called Olympia Fields police, who arrested the duo.

Bail was set at $5,000 for each man. Club officials tallied the damages at $3,311.15. Bourassa has been thrown out of the club.

The outdoor dining, including the fire pit, is part of an ongoing multi-million renovation of the clubhouse.

The grind of the aspiring professional

They're called home games.

In team sports, half your games are at home. You sleep in your own bed, don't have people running down a hall outside your bedroom in the middle of the night, know exactly how to get the right temperature in the shower, and can have a midnight snack without having to buy it.

It's a perfect world.

In golf, the home game is rare. The tour, whatever tour is it, is out there somewhere, a long car or plane ride away. The routine is to check in – at the airport, at the hotel, at the golf course – and then settle in to play.

The hardest part is settling in, getting comfortable, placing the distractions in a pocket of the golf bag and then playing at the highest level.

Those who do it best are invariably the most focused. The wail in the distance doesn't bother the focused. They play now and remember where their hotel is later.

All the noise outside the ropes is quieter when a home game is played, even if it isn't that close to home. But that doesn't make success automatic. Ask those from the area who teed it up in last weekend's Rust-Oleum Championship at the Ivanhoe Club in north central Lake County.

This was as close as it gets on the web.com Tour for Carlos Sainz Jr., Nick Hardy, Vince India and Brad Hopfinger, the four Chicago-area players of note in the field. Sainz is from Elgin, Hardy from Northbrook, India from Deerfield, Hopfinger from Chicago.

Of that quartet, Sainz's situation is the most difficult. The 32-year-old played in only two of the first four tournaments of the season, in Panama and Colombia, finishing tied for eighth in the latter. That earned him close to $17,000, but in the other five tournaments where he made the cut, his biggest check was $2,105.

"I'm not exactly from this area – 25-30 miles away – but it definitely feels like home, sleeping in my own bed, eating my own food that I'm used to eating when I'm home," Sainz said.

Familiarity didn't help a great deal. Sainz, while he birdied four of the first six holes, faded on Friday and finished at 1-under 143. That missed the cut by two strokes. You have to go low and stay there on every pro tour, even when you're playing against people who are largely unknown. And you have to keep playing.

"I played 14 in a row a few years ago," Sainz said. "On this tour, it's kinda of hard to take some weeks off. (This year) I knew I was going to get into a couple of events and when you have your opportunity, you've got to capitalize, and I did."

Sainz has been on the cusp of breaking through, as Kevin Streelman did a few years back, for a while. He had a PGA Tour card in 2015 and lost it, making only three cuts in 20 starts. He tied for ninth early in the year and made the bulk of the $124,115 he earned that season in that week.

Hopfinger's in better shape this season, with $71,961 earned, including $5,319.75 for tying for 22nd at the Rust-Oleum, and sits 40th in the standings. The top 25 jump to the PGA Tour and he'd get a second chance in the playoffs.

"Especially after four weeks on the road, it's nice to be home," Hopfinger said. "Pressure? I actually think there's less. It's a course I'm familiar with, grasses I'm familiar with. In many ways, I think it's an easier week."

India, 29, made his first cut in only five appearances, finishing 69th and earning $1,452.

It was Hardy's professional coming-out party and a successful one. Boosted by a second-round 67, he finished at 7-under 281, tied for 33rd and collected $3,070.

Hardy's family and friends were on hand to watch. So were Sainz's, including his mom, who played the caddie role when he won the Illinois Open two years ago. When they tee it up next, they'll have their caddie, and that's it.

What Chicago doesn't have on the big tour is a real home game, as the Western Open once was. Renamed the BMW Championship, it brings in more money than ever to the coffers of the Evans Scholars Foundation, which is great, but it's only in Chicago in odd-numbered years now. (This year, it's in Philadelphia.)

The John Deere Classic? It's a long commute from Chicago if you're playing and want to sleep in your own bed. So, no. That's a road game, though a delightful one.

The Rust-Oleum, then, presuming it continues, is it for the local hopefuls. We wish them well.

5TH RUST-OLEUM CHAMPIONSHIP

This one was for ‘Zink’

BY TIM CRONIN
REPORTING FROM IVANHOE

Chase Wright has made one start on the PGA Tour, six years ago in the McGladrey Classic. He opened with a 67, tied for 64th, and earned $8,360, all of which is long gone.

He'll make a bunch more starts on the big circuit beginning this fall, thanks to winning the Rust-Oleum Championship on Sun., June 10 at the Ivanhoe Club. Wright birdied the second hole of a sudden-death playoff to beat Alex Prugh after they tied at 17-under-par 271.

Wright had played most of time the last five seasons on the web.com Tour, but was a regular on the Canadian circuit, known as the Mackenzie Tour, last season. That's two rungs beneath the PGA Tour, but Wright, 28, never gave up hope.

Part of his confidence and grace under pressure came from the memory of an absent friend, Dennis “Zink” Zinkon, a journeyman pro who worked for the tour when Wright arrived on it. Zinkon died two years ago.

“I was actually thinking about him coming in,” Wright said. “He was definitely there with me today. He used to tell me putting is pretty easy. Aim it, roll it and repeat one and two if necessary.”

Wright birdied the 14th and 15th holes, then parred the final three – including an 80-foot two-putt on the par-3 17th – to post his third straight 4-under 68 after an opening 67. That matched Prugh, who birdied three of the last five holes to close with a 67. It would have been a 66 for a win had he made a 15-footer for birdie at the last.

Instead, they went into a playoff, matching par 4s on the 18th the first time. Wright hit a 7-iron to five feet from 170 yards out the second time to set up his birdie, the winner after Prugh missed his chance for a bird from 20 feet.

“I just wanted to not beat myself,” Wright said. “As long as I hung in there and did my thing I would be fine.”

Wright earned $108,000 from the $600,000 purse, and better than that, is a lock for a PGA Tour card for next season. He jumped to fifth in the season standings, and the top 25 advance. That more than made up for losing in a playoff for a U.S. Open spot last week.

“This week was way more important than going out there for one week,” Wright said. “I want to be out there for 30 weeks.”

The recent and year-ago graduates of college golf showed well. Big hitter Cameron Champ tied for fourth at 15-under 273, while Maverick McNealy tied for sixth a stroke behind Champ.

Brad Hofinger of Chicago had the best local showing, tying for 22nd at 9-under 279. Illinois grad Nick Hardy's 281 in his pro debut brought him a tie for 33rd and $3,070 in his bank account. They beat the two major champions in the field: Mike Weir and Shaun Micheel tied for 56th at 3-under 285.

Scott Langley, another Illinois alum, also beat that duo, holding on to his spot at the No. 2 money winner on the tour thanks to a 3-under 69 in the final round.

Deerfield's Vince India scored 290 to finish 69th. Carlos Sainz Jr. of Elgin missed the cut.

67TH ILLINOIS PGA MATCH PLAY

Chaussard bags his first major

Outlasts Bauer in 20-hole semifinal before subduing Green in championship match

BY TIM CRONIN
REPORTING FROM KILDEER

First Garrett Chaussard had to get to the championship match. Last year, he dropped a semifinal decision to Danny Mulhearn, the latest in a string of heartbreaks.

Thur., May 10 at Kemper Lakes Golf Club was different for Chaussard. In the morning, he needed 20 holes to beat Kyle Bauer, advancing him to the 67th Illinois PGA Match Play Championship title match.

Then he had to beat Chris Green, a frequent golf companion. They had practiced together for Monday's U.S. Open local qualifier. Their jobs – Chaussard at Skokie Country Club, Green at Glen View Club – are only a few miles apart, so they play occasionally.

But when the time came, Chaussard put the hammer down. His 12-foot birdie putt on the par-3 13th gave him a 2-up lead on Green, and he parlayed that into a 3 and 2 victory for the title, his first in a state major.

"It feels good," Chaussard said. "It's kind of an unexpected one. I don't think you ever go in thinking you'll win a match play event because there's so much luck involved. I happened to be on the right side of a few very close matches and it was enough to win."

Green said his play in the title match was his worst of the week. He had scored a 2 and 1 victory over Brian Carroll of Royal Hawk in the semifinal.

"Four or five or six over isn't going to get it done in the final," Green said. "And Garrett's a steady competitor. He's not going to give it back. I'm happy to get to today."

Green had chipped in for birdie on the second hole, but Chaussard birdied on top of him to keep the match square. Green won the fourth hole with a par, lost the fifth, won the sixth to lead again, but lost the eighth and ninth with a bogey and double-bogey, handing Chaussard a 1-up lead. He never surrendered it.

"I hit a couple good irons shots," Chaussard said. "I didn't drive it particularly well, not as well as I have. Left and a few right, all over the place. But I hit a few really good iron shots when I really needed to."

Chaussard had been chasing a major title – the Illinois Open, Illinois PGA, Illinois PGA

Match Play or Illinois Players Championship – for several years. In the case of the Match Play, he'd lost to Curtis Malm in the 2014 semifinals, been knocked out in the semifinals by Brodell in 2015, was stopped by Matt Slowinski in the quarterfinals in 2016, and fell to Mulhearn in the semis last year.

This time, he went all the way. The odd thing was playing someone who's become a good friend in the championship match.

"We've been pretty good friends for a few years now," Chaussard said. "We play a good bit of golf; when we're playing a practice round somewhere we pair up and play. And we chat a lot. I don't know how much he'll like me after today. I'm sure he'll get back at me.

"There's probably some comfort factor (playing a friend), because you know what to expect from his golf game. I know he's not going to hit it 100 yards by me, like some other guys in the field would.

"It probably did take some of the tension out of it."

Green agreed.

"Obviously, it's fun playing with people you like," Green said. "Most of the way through, we play people we're friends with, like Brian Carroll, Frank Hohnadel. So it's fun. The last thing you want to do is go out and spend three or four hours not talking to each other.

Northwestern women lose in NCAA quarters

FROM IG NEWS SERVICES

Northwestern's women's team advanced to the quarterfinals of the NCAA Championship on May 22, but no further. The Wildcats' quest to repeat their 2017 run to the title match ended when Janet Mao missed a must-make birdie putt on the 18th hole against Stanford's Andrea Lee with the teams tied 2-2.

Mao had sunk a birdie putt to

"I'm just glad he didn't shoot 65 and beat me 9 and 8."

The battle with Bauer in the semi took until the second extra hole to resolve.

"Neither Kyle nor I played really well," Chaussard said. "I had a few chances to put him away and couldn't get it done, and it was kind of a stick-with-it and keep going."

The grind got to Chaussard and Green. The winner agreed with the notion it was an endurance contest.

"I think it is," Chaussard said. "I'm not used to playing this much golf (five matches in four days), even if we're riding. And I played in U.S. Open qualifying on Monday, so 36-36-36 and the rest."

"Long week."

Chaussard earned $5,000, while Green received $2,750 as balm.

extend the match on the 17th, but couldn't repeat the feat, losing 1-up.

Seniors Sarah Cho and Hannah Kim won their matches, but junior Stephanie Lau and sophomore Brooke Riley lost, leaving it up to junior Mao, up against an All-Pacific 12 first teamer in Lee.

The outcome for Northwestern, which scored the fourth seed in stroke play, is still the second-best finish in team history behind last year's runner-up showing.

CAROL MANN • 1941-2018

A champion and visionary

BY TIM CRONIN

A few years ago at Olympia Fields Country Club, Carol Mann relayed an interesting observation about reading a golf course.

"You can see how to play a hole much better from behind the green than you can from the tee," Mann said.

That was atypical of how she lived her life. Carol Ann Mann looked forward, not backward, and the successes she attained almost from start to finish reflected that outlook. Others could look back, and while they did, she moved ahead.

Mann, 77, died at her home in The Woodlands, Tex., on May 20. She left behind a legion of friends and even more admirers from the world of golf and beyond.

Her playing career – including a pair of major championship titles and 38 LPGA Tour triumphs in all – would have been enough for election to the World Golf Hall of Fame, to which she was elected in 1977. Her first major was the 1964 Women's Western Open, and her second was the 1965 U.S. Women's Open, the first women's tournament on television. She won 10 times in 1968 and eight more times in 1969.

Mann, however, was more than a great player. She was a visionary as well. A member of the LPGA from the days when the membership did everything from mark the course to make the rulings, she rose to the presidency of the organization in 1973, and immediately set about expanding the staff, starting with hiring the circuit's first commissioner.

From there, the LPGA began to grow, with bigger purses and more tournaments on television, which brought in more sponsors and allowed more than just the top players to make a living playing professional golf.

Then Mann went before the camera. NBC brought her aboard as the first female with a regular role on golf telecasts, covering both the PGA and LPGA. Later, she was hired by ABC and ESPN.

Mann also worked in golf course design and advised players in recent years.

At 6-foot-3, she towered over her peers beyond her brilliant play. Born in Buffalo, N.Y., and tall as a child, she played a little golf when her family lived in Baltimore, but took to the game when they moved to Flossmoor and her father, Louis "Rip" Mann, joined Olympia Fields, because his company would pay for it.

It was there that young Mann became a real golfer. Guided by assistant Jim Scott, Mann won the Chicago Girls Junior and Women's Western Junior in 1958, three years after she made it into the consolation bracket of the fifth flight of the Women's Western Amateur, played at Olympia when she was 14.

"I chipped in on the 18th on the South Course to win as the championship match was coming from the seventh to the eighth hole," she recalled. "It was the first time I played in front of people. I liked it."

"Being in Chicago gave me the proximity to national tournaments, and that made me want to play better. You don't want to go somewhere and lose!"

Befitting her achievements, Mann was named an honorary member of Olympia Fields twice.

DICK CARPARELLI • 1917-2018

Red was the spirit of Beverly

BY TIM CRONIN

Bob Moysey, who joined Beverly Country Club in 1953, couldn't remember precisely when he first took a lesson from Dick Carparelli.

He only knew he had taken countless lessons from the pro who became a close friend.

"The first one was probably 1956 or 1957," Moysey said when interviewed for Beverly's centennial history. "I had been taking lessons from Charley Penna. He finally said, 'I've got to turn you over to Dick. You're starting to affect my swing.'

"Really."

Carparelli thus took over, and never stopped.

Really.

When Carparelli died on May 30 at 100, he was in his 73rd year at Beverly, having arrived at the South Side paradise in 1946 as an assistant to head professional Charley Penna. He was co-head pro after Penna retired, an assistant again, a teaching specialist, and finally pro emeritus and an honorary member after retiring.

He hadn't been around the club much in the last year or so as his health declined, but it's hard to imagine anyone being associated on a professional basis with the same club anywhere for more time.

"He's done a masterful job of navigating himself through the maze of problems that any pro

Beverly Country Club

RED AND WHO? Dick Carparelli (right) and Sam Snead during the pro-am named for Red at Beverly. fessional has," Moysey said in 2008. "To go for 60 years in a club, you have to do that. He makes friends with everybody. Over the years, when a faction would get control of the club, and some were not in favor of him, people would come to his rescue.

"He's more than a pro to the club. He's a fixture."

When Penna brought him on, he took care that the club's then WASP-oriented membership accepted him. He told Angelo Nicolas Carparelli to sign his name as "R. Carparelli," as in red, his hair color. He did. It worked. Members thought his first name was Richard, called him Dick, and he was hired.

Moysey wasn't the only lesson-taker. Celebrities flocked to him, hardly a surprise given he caddied for Al Jolson and Keystone Kops creator Mack Sennett as a kid in Rye, N.Y.

When Cab Calloway, Jack Nicholson or Bill Murray showed up at Beverly, and needed a quick tuneup, Red was there for them. He helped Murray perfect a lovely draw.

He was married to Christine until her death, and doted on daughter Felicia and grandchildren Tina and Pete.

Carparelli could also sing, and at least once, he took on an acting role. It was when he and a squadron of Beverly members had decamped in Palm Springs, Calif. Needing to dine and quench their thirst, they found a favored restaurant full, save for an unavailable back room. When it was explained that a private accommodation was needed for an Italian count, management acceded to the request.

At the appointed hour, in walked Count Riccardo Caparelli, suitably attired in smoking jacket and ascot, playing the part to the hilt.

Another legend of Carparelli was born. The memories will never die.

Back to the past

The USGA takes the Open back to Shinnecock Hills

BY TIM CRONIN

PHOTOGRAPH BY JOHN MUMMERT / © USGA

Murder was committed at Shinnecock Hills Golf Club the last time the U.S. Open was played there.

The United States Golf Association killed the seventh green.

There was no chalkline around it, but it was clear for all to see. Browned-out grass being watered after every other group on a windy Sunday afternoon on Long Island was all the evidence needed.

The par-3 turned into a guessing game. Scores soared and faces of some of the blue-jacketed USGA brass turned red. Shinnecock Hills broke off talks to host another Open.

Retief Goosen guessed right. He parred the seventh en route to a 1-over 71 for 4-under 276 and his second Open title, beating Phil Mickelson, who also parred the seventh, but double-bogeyed the 17th, killing his chances – by two strokes. They were the only players under par.

Fences have since been mended between the club and the USGA. This year's set-up will be demanding but not overbearing. Mickelson, the six-time runner-up who needs a National Open title to complete a career grand slam, is enthralled with the look of the course.

"It's the best setup, in my opinion, that we've seen, and the reason I say that is all areas of your game are being tested," Mickelson said Mon., June 10. "There are some birdie holes. There's some really hard pars. There's some fairways that are easy to hit, fairways that are tough to hit."

"The chipping and short game around the greens are going to be a huge factor this week. The challenge of the greens being extended and all the contours will continue to take balls further from the hole. You end up in fairway and have a shot, albeit a difficult one."

Mickelson's back, but Goosen is not. The USGA issued exemptions to Ryder Cup captains Jim Furyk and Ernie Els, both former U.S. Open champions, Els having won twice, but not the two-time winner who won at Shinnecock the last time around. That's something of a bogey.

Mickelson's quest has become somewhat Sisyphean. So often he's come to winning the Open, and so often he has not, notably in 2006, when he nearly had the trophy in his hands at Winged Foot, only to block his tee shot at the last onto the roof is a corporate tent. Geoff Ogilvy's 5-over 285 took the title, Mickelson finishing one back along with Furyk – who has three runner-up placings along with his 2003 victory at Olympia Fields – and Colin Montgomerie.

Brooks Koepka is the defender off his victory last June at Erin Hills, but not the favorite. That would have to be 2016 winner Dustin Johnson, the bomber who has discovered a surgeon's touch around and on the greens in recent years, and comes into the big show off his eagle-holetout finish at Memphis last week. That vaulted him back into the No. 1 spot on the now-mercurial World Ranking, displacing Justin Thomas.

Thomas and pal Jordan Spieth, who pipped Johnson at Chambers Bay in 2015, should also show well, along with Justin Rose, who won in 2013 and is back in form.

All of the aforementioned share similar characteristics. They can putt – Johnson's Achilles' heel in 2015, and since remedied – and can hammer the ball long distances, though Rose is the shortest of the set.

The combination of accuracy off the tee and into the green will be more critical this year than at Erin Hills, where a lack of wind for the better part of four days and wide fairways designed to compensate for the unblowing gales conspired to create low scores. It was as if the Travelers tournament was being played a week early.

Such a birdfest – Koepka won at 16-under 272 – is less likely this week. Shinnecock's greatest defense is the wind, as is true of most links courses, but the sloping greens and falloffs around them can turn a hoped-for 4 into an unwanted 6 with the flick of a wrist.

"I feel like your short game's going to be challenged," Mickelson went on. "Putting will be challenged, as well as ball striking, irons, driver. I feel as though the luck of a course has been taken out as much as possible to where skill is the primary factor."

"If you do miss a green, it will stay in the fairway. It will stay where touch will be a factor. I love how that has been brought into it, rather than the 'hack out of the rough, hope it comes out okay' factor."

There are 20 amateurs in the field – the usual PGA Tour stop might have one or two – of whom the most heralded is Arlington Heights' Doug Ghim, the runner-up in last year's U.S. Amateur, and the low amateur in this year's Masters. He'll turn pro after the Open. (Illinois grad Dylan Meyer, who won his spot through local and sectional qualifying, will take the cash this week.)

64TH WOMEN'S PGA CHAMPIONSHIP PREVIEW

Can Kang conquer Kemper?

Women's PGA marks club's return to spotlight

BY TIM CRONIN

Women's professional golf isn't the place for a longshot. Sure, there are surprises from time to time, but generally speaking, a favorite – there are perhaps 30 to three dozen to which that characterization can be applied – lifts the trophy on Sunday afternoon on the LPGA Tour.

Curiously, that doesn't always work in the major championships. The U.S. Women's Open, captured recently by Aryia Jutanugarn, among the top players in the game, has a history of one-shot wonders and players who only had a bit of success before or after.

Remember Kathy Baker? Lauri Merten? Can't imagine why not.

April's ANA Inspiration – the Dinah Shore – provided a surprise winner in Pernilla Lindberg

PGA of America

after a marathon playoff that finished on a Monday morning.

Now comes the third major of the year for women, the KPMG Women's PGA Championship, won last year by Danielle Kang. She wasn't a complete surprise, but neither was she among the first mentioned either when it came to picking those who were expected to contend last year at Olympia Fields Country Club.

Among the first-named then were Brooke Henderson, the defender who finished second, along with Lydia Ko, Michelle Wie, and any number of players from South Korea.

"I (remember) a lot of different shots that I hit," Kang said of her best week in golf. "I have memorable shot moments, and it wasn't just on Sunday."

Now Kang, whose previous best placing in a major was 14th in the 2012 U.S. Women's Open, is among the first named. She'll be defending her title from June 28-July 1 at Kemper Lakes Golf Club in north suburban Kildeer, a course that is no stranger to championship golf.

Her 2018 hasn't been as good as last year, with a tie for second in Singapore the best showing compared to a half-dozen top-10s last year. Still, the two-time U.S. Women's Amateur winner didn't really catch fire until Olympia Fields, and that victory was a relief.

"Trying to force a win for the last few years and trying to just get it done, trying to win before my dad passed away (in 2013), all of that was so hard on me," Kang said in Chicago recently.

Along with the annual appearance of the Illinois PGA's match-play tournament, Kemper Lakes made its first big splash by hosting the 1989 PGA Championship, won by Payne Stewart.

That and a pair of United States Golf Association championships – including the 1992 Women's Amateur, when Vicki Goetze beat Annika Sorenstam – were held when the course was owned by KemperSports. It was sold in 2002 to a group that took Kemper Lakes private in 2007, and the membership decided to get back into the tournament business. After a three-year renovation by Rick Jacobson, the doors are open.

"We reached out to the PGA of America to begin discussions to 'restore the roar' from hosting the 1989 PGA Championship," owner Steve Jouzapaitis said. "I knew we'd have to make the inevitable course and clubhouse upgrades – which all courses eventually have to do – so we did. The obvious benefit is to our loyal members who have supported our goal of hosting another major championship. The course and clubhouse upgrades and improvements that we made will last well beyond the last week of June 2018."

Which brings us to Kemper Lakes 29 years after Stewart birdied four of the last five holes to jump past faltering Mike Reid to get his hands on the Wanamaker Trophy.

Kane doesn't want to surrender the LPGA Championship Trophy – the name of the competition was changed when the PGA of America took over operation from the LPGA in 2015 – anytime soon.

"Finally just having that win just gives me this freedom," Kang said. "I can breathe. I feel free from myself. I can just be myself and just play golf like I used to."

As this is published, Kang is 13th on the 2018 money list with $483,331 in 11 starts, compared to Ariya Jutanugarn, No. 1 at $1,704,614 (with sister Moriya third at $700,946). The top American is Jessica Korda, eighth at $550,008, with Wie 12th at $489,079.

118TH WOMEN'S WESTERN AMATEUR PREVIEW

Mistwood site of wide-open Women's Western

BY TIM CRONIN

If you want to see who's next in women's golf, the 118th Women's Western Amateur at Mistwood Golf Club in Romeoville is the place to be.

There, from June 25-30, some of the best female amateur players in the world will tee it up in the second most prestigious women's amateur tourney in the land, behind only the U.S. Women's Amateur. Coming from 10 countries aside from the U.S., the 120-player field will tackle Mistwood first in stroke play, and then the top 32 players will engage in match play.

That's a difference from past years, when the field was 144 strong, the top 64 made match play, and everyone else was slotted into consolation flights. The latter, a vestige of the era when many competitors were country clubbers and could take a week off to play, has been eliminated.

This streamlined Women's Western Am should be no less competitive, perhaps more so in stroke play, given the halved match play field.

The players are largely unknown now, but the quality is there. Only six years ago, Ariya Jutanugarn was winning the Women's Western. Earlier this month, she won the U.S. Women's Open. In 2006, Stacy Lewis captured the Women's Western, while winners in the more distant past include Beth Daniel and Nancy Lopez. You get the idea. This is essentially the LPGA Tour six to 10 years from now.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

MAGICAL MISTWOOD No expense is spared to keep Mistwood Golf Club in tip-top shape.

As has become a habit in recent years, the more recent winner isn't defending. The crowded golf calendar – more on that later – means world No. 19 Maddie Szeryk of Texas isn't defending her title. Rather, she's playing in the British Ladies' Amateur, the equal to the U.S. Women's Am on that side of the Atlantic.

Her younger sister, Ellie Szeryk, will be on hand, and under the banner of Canada, as the family has dual-citizenship and she's part of a Golf-Canada initiative.

The British Ladies' Am has taken a number of highly-ranked players besides Maddie Szeryk from the field. The highest-ranked player as of June 10 is No. 28 Emilia Migliaccio of Cary, N.C. Allisen Corpuz of Waipahu, Hawaii, 66th in the ranking, is also in the field, along with Mikhaela Fortuna of Dasmariñas City, Philippines, the runner-up in 2016.

Chicago-area players in the field include several familiar with Mistwood, including Brianne Bolden of Mokena and Grace Curran of New Lenox, teammates at Lincoln-Way Central High, Illinois-Chicago senior Kelly Sterling of Mokena, and 2016 Western Junior champion Kate Lillie of St. Charles, a Minnesota Golden Gopher.

The only drawback to an exciting week is the conflict with an area major championship for the second year running. Last year, when the WWGA played River Forest Country Club, it was the same week as the U.S. Open at Erin Hills. This year, it's the same week as the Women's PGA Championship at Kemper Lakes.

This is the last year the WWGA will run its championship itself. On August 1, the delayed-a-year five-year management deal with the Western Golf Association kicks in, with the WGA taking over many of the responsibilities the all-volunteer WWGA has managed for nearly a century and a quarter.

57TH RADIX CUP PREVIEW

Battle royale at Oak Park

Radix Cup no longer a walk in park for pros

BY TIM CRONIN

It got to be an embarrassment.

Every year in the Radix Cup, the professionals would rout the amateurs.

What had been conceived by pros and pals Bill Ogden and Errie Ball as a celebration of Illinois golf to honor Harry Radix was turning into a trip to the woodshed. Then guys like Gary Hallberg came along, and the tables turned. After losing the first 12 matches, the amateurs won four in a row. The Radix Cup was a contest.

It has been ever since. A four-win streak is the longest run since the opening skein, most recently achieved by the pros, representing the Illinois PGA, from 1991-94. Neither side's won more than two straight since 1998, and the amateurs, waving the flag of the Chicago District Golf Association, hold an 11-9 edge since then.

That makes the annual get-together at Oak Park Country Club among the most anticipated days on the calendar. At 12:45 p.m. on Wed., June 12, the dozen players from each side will tee off in a half-dozen best-ball matches, a point to the winning side for each nine and overall. Expect the margin to be no more than five points. It's been that close or closer in 11 of the last 17 matches.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

THE BAUBLE The Radix Cup Trophy is designed to hold a selection of fruit.

The two sides are formidable. Here are the matches, professionals listed first:

12:45 p.m.: Kyle Bauer (Glen View), Chris Green (Glen View) vs. Michael Fastert (Sanctuary), Charlie Waddell (Shoreacres).

12:55 p.m.: Ryan Peavey (Oak Park), Carson Solien (Oak Park) vs. Dave Ryan (Illini), Justin Smith (Oak Park).

1:05 p.m.: Garrett Chaussard (Skokie), Matt Slowinski (Hinsdale) vs. Mike Cushing (Bloomington), Todd Mitchell (Crestwicke).

1:15 p.m.: Rich Dukelow (Medinah), Travis

Top Radix Cup players

14-6	Mike Harrigan	1978-2010
13-5-1	Steve Benson	1971-1998

10-4-4	a-Dave Huske	1963-1985
9-3-1	Errie Ball	1962-1977

Most appearances: 23, Joel Hirsch, 1965-2001

Professionals lead series 35-19-2

Johns (Medinah) vs. Brian Hickey (Edgewood Valley), Chadd Slutzky (The Grove).

1:25 p.m.: Brian Brodell (Mistwood), Brian Carroll (Royal Hawk) vs. Brian Ohr (Merit), Trent Wallace (Inwood).

1:35 p.m.: Jim Billiter (Kemper Lakes), Dakun Chung (Twin Orchard) vs. Greg Bauman (Biltmore), Matthew Murlick (Winnetka).

Bauman is the second son of a Radix Cup veteran to play in it, following Hubby and Bruce Habjan. Father Doug Bauman was 6-6-2 in 14 starts as a professional.

AROUND ILLINOIS

Illini, Wildcats fall in NCAA men's final

Triplett 50th for Northwestern, but both squads absent from match play

BY TIM CRONIN

This was not the year anyone expected Illinois' run of appearances in the match-play portion of the NCAA Championship would end. Not with the 1-2 punch of Nick Hardy and Dylan Meyer leading the way.

End it did, and stunningly. The Fighting Illini were ousted in stroke play for the first time since 2012, missing the Elite Eight by seven strokes at Karsten Creek Golf Club in Stillwater, Okla.

Maybe the end-of-regular season coaches' poll was correct. Illinois was ranked 11th and finished 11th.

"I thought the front nine was strong and we put ourselves in position to really do something special," Illini coach Mike Small said after the final putt dropped. "But on the back nine, we got off point a little too often."

Illinois' team score of 24-over-par 1,176 was seven too many to match eighth-place Texas A&M, and like that, the Illini were on the way home. Meyer's 5-under 283, good for a fourth-place tie, was the best individual showing, followed by Hardy's tie for 32nd at 4-over 292. Small was wistful at knowing their time at Illinois was over.

Severe storm hammers UI courses in Savoy

A series of thunderstorms, including a possible tornado, raked the southwest Champaign-Urbana area on Sun., June 10, and the University of Illinois courses in Savoy, a few miles south of the main campus, were among the hardest hit areas.

Approximated 50 trees were uprooted on the Orange Course of the 36-hole complex, according to professional Mike Wallner.

"It was a pleasure as a coach to have Nick and Dylan for four years," Small said in Stillwater. "All of the success they had individually and as a team will leave a legacy that will last for a long time."

Illinois has won the Big Ten four years in a row, nine times in the last 10, and appeared in 11 straight NCAA Championships, where the Illini have taken second once, had a run of four semifinal appearances in five years and six quarterfinals in seven. That makes an 11th-place finish a disappointment, relatively speaking.

Northwestern also took it on the chin. The Wildcats were cut after the third round of stroke play, finishing tied for 16th out of 30 squads at 20-over 884. Only senior Sam Triplett made the final round, and finished at 10-over 298 after a final-round 79 following rounds of 71-76-72. He finished 50th.

The Wildcats opened strongly and led after the first round, thanks largely to a 5-under 67 by Ryan Lumsden, a 70 from Everton Hawkins and Triplett's 71. Dylan Wu added an even-par 72. But after the opening set, the best scores were the 72s by Triplett and Eric McIntosh in the third round, and Northwestern slid back quickly.

Getting to the NCAA was an achievement considered mid-season upheaval, when junior Luke Miller was bounced after a March 14 auto accident and DUI charge, and freshman Ethan Farnam left the program separately. Their college destinations are unknown.

Closed Blue Needles is auctioned

It closed officially in 2017, but for a time, a neighbor of Blue Needles Golf Course in Vermilion County continued to mow one hole for fun and wedge practice.

Now even that is no more. The 116-acre site near Fairmount went up for auction in seven tracts on June 7, following the deaths last year of the co-founders, as well as an additional investor this January.

A 6,081-yard par-72 course on flat and mostly treeless former farmland, Blue Needles was never going to host a U.S. Open, but it was perfect for the beginning golfer and area residents, especially seniors, who loved to spank a Spalding.

But the overall decline in golfers of all types is as evident in central Illinois as anywhere else, and Blue Needles felt the impact of unfilled tee times.

Opened in 1988 by Gary Carter and Tom Huffman, it was closed last year. Huffman died in April, Carter in September. According to his death notice, Carter had designed the course, called "a great representation of his earth-moving talents and design capabilities, as well as a place for many lasting memories for many different people."

Results of the auction were not known when this issue was published, but a previous attempt to sell Blue Needles as a golf course had failed, and it was expected to be returned to farmland.

The closure leaves four public courses in Vermilion County, three in Danville and Hubbard Trail in Hooperston.

Stone Creek Golf Club

STONE CREEK'S LAST YEAR? There's a chance revenue declines will lead to the closure of the Urbana gem.

Future iffy for Urbana's Stone Creek

"I think people enjoy it, but golf's not the same as it was," Spencer Atkins told the Champaign News-Gazette in April. The owner of Stone Creek Golf Club in Urbana, Atkins said there was a possibility the posh 18-hole layout would close after this season.

Opened by his father Clint Atkins in 2000, Stone Creek is a major holding of The Atkins Group, developer of the 301-lot residential community that so far sees 176 homes on the property. But Clint Atkins died in 2011 and golf was in decline even then.

"I'm not going to go on record and say that it's ever made money," Atkins said. "When Clint owned it, he was the only shareholder, and so what he wanted was his vision, and he executed his vision. The family respects his vision and would like to keep it that way, but it's not feasible."

Options if an 18-hole layout is abandoned include going to nine holes, gardens, a stable, concert pavilion or parkland, Atkins said.

Finnin, Ryan win Olympia Four-Ball bracket

John Finnin of Mokena and Dave Ryan of Taylorville scored a six-stroke victory in the senior division of the recent Olympia Fields National Four-Ball Invitational. The duo put together rounds of 69 and 66, and their total of 9-under 135 beat Lee Kolquist and Reed Kolquist. Finnin is an Olympia member, while Ryan won the U.S. Senior Amateur in 2016.

The mid-amateur bracket was closer, Rob Laird and Tyler Hunt combining for a 66-67-133 total for 11-under, good for a two-stroke win.
