ROOM FOR ALL The entrance to Signal Point Club in Niles, Mich., was open to only a select few for decades.

To those close to the scene, it's not the biggest surprise that public golfers are now able to click on Calumet Country Club's website (www.calumetc.com) and make a tee time. Rumors that the venerable club, set in Homewood since 1920 and founded at the turn of the last century, would go public in some fashion aren't new. Nor are the persistent reports that the club has been sold and only a delay in the complicated closing is keeping the Donald Ross course from being plowed under after its 100th season, destined to become a UPS distribution center.

That the average public golfer can now get a taste of the good life at Caumet is exciting news. That it likely will only last a year is unfortunate. Even after the Tri-State Tollway split the property and caused a rebuilding of two-thirds of the course in 1957, architects Larry Packard and Brent Wadsworth – in the nascent stages of becoming the go-to man for course construction – rebuilt it in Ross' style. It's a spot on Chicago's golf map that should stay on the map.

The second course in the headline is a startling development. The Signal Point Club in Niles, Mich., had been an ultra-private enclave since Chicago's Robert Bruce Harris designed it in 1963. Now, those who buy a Blackthorn Gold pass from the co-owned Blackthorn layout a few miles away in South Bend, Ind. get access to the hidden gem on the bluff above the St. Joseph River by paying a green fee.

There's no walk-up play for non-cardholders, but the Blackthorn Gold pass is only $199 for the year. Last year's fancy driver on discount costs as much or more.

Founded by Niles businessman Lawrence Plym, Signal Point was intended to be special. Plym was a member of Chicago Golf, Old Elm and Glen View, and directed Harris to create a nine-hole course, but with two tees from different angles on each hole playing to different cups on each oversized green for 18 holes of play on the narrow 90-acre property on the west side of the river.

Signal Point attracted attention for that reason, for its pristine condition and considerable difficulty – Golf Digest's Toughest 200, today the Greatest 100, had it high in its list even though it was considered a nine-hole course – and because the membership was at first between 25 and 50 of Plym's pals.

By about 2005, the membership was limited to about 100, and the whisper was no more than 2,500 rounds a year were played on the course, among the lowest numbers in the country.

But for those reading between the lines in Michiana, there was trouble afoot for the immaculately-maintained course.

A 2004 ad in the South Bend Tribune wooed members of the public for a day open to anyone for a modest green fee, designed to showcase Signal Point to potential members. More ads touting membership ran occasionally through 2017. Additionally, a membership offer was circulated to area businessmen in 2011, noting there were 89 full members and 11 more were needed to fill the roster.

Last summer, enter the Blackthorn group, headed by businessman Tim Firestone. He, Joe Herbert and Eric Haag had bought Blackthorn from the city of South Bend in 2015 to go with other businesses, and found Signal Point's membership, down to about 50, eager to deal.

"The purchase of Signal Point fits very well in our portfolio as we grow our golf business as well as our event and food and beverage business," Firestone told the South Bend Tribune last year. "We have found that we needed more holes of golf and we needed more opportunity."

A deal was made last July, not that anyone outside of the South Bend area heard about it. A Blackthorn member – which is to say a season pass-holder – could now play Signal Point as well.

The same deal holds true this year. Purchasers of the regular Blackthorn season pass ($99) get limited access, but Blackthorn Gold passholders ($199) can play any time by paying a guest green fee. Silver and Gold full members need only call to get a tee time. Buy the $199 pass and play eight twilight rounds at Signal Point, and it's effectively $50 a round.

For a course that people long could see only from the middle of the St. Joseph River, one where the Studebaker family and Notre Dame football coach Lou Holtz used to hang out at, that's amazing.

Calumet and Signal Point join Joliet Country Club as private clubs that have open the doors to the public to remain in business. Expect more examples as the shrinking of the golf business continues.

Remember the PGA Championship?

Brooks Koepka won last year's PGA Championship, and three of the last seven majors.

Tiger Woods won last month's Masters.

So why is there next to no buzz for the upcoming PGA?

It's returning to May for the first time in decades – it was played at the end of the year's fifth month for a time in the match-play era – it will be played in less than 100-degree heat and 90-percent humidity, and it's in Noo Yawk, which usually guarantees an extra dollop of hype.

Go figure. We can't.

Perhaps it's because this is essentially a new deal. The last match-play PGA was 1957, and by then, the Wanamaker Trophy was being awarded in July, often a week or so after the British Open. People are used to habits, and this is a sea change.

The PGA of America shifted its signature major to May to play nice with the PGA Tour, whose playoffs were getting buried in television ratings by the NFL whenever they ran up against the gridiron lads, which was always for the BMW Championship and the Tour Championship, the playoff semifinals and finals. Those will now be played in August, where only preseason football threatens to steal the audience and space in newspapers.

The PGA Championship has been the last major of the year through the television era. "Glory's Last Shot," it was so named by the PGA until the Tour hollered and noted the presence of the playoffs, which are at least lucrative and may be glorious, if you care about more than four weeks of golf per annum.

But this is what you get for being nice: the results of unintended circumstances.

Moving to May means competition from all corners. This is a week where the Stanley Cup and NBA playoffs are in the semifinal – or conference championship – stage, with the attention of Boston and the Bay Area, to mention two golf-crazy areas, focused on their hometown heroes. Oh, and thanks to a pair of surprises in the early rounds, the pucksters from golf-hotbed Carolina too, though perhaps not for long.

On Saturday, that round of a tournament Ken Venturi cannily named Moving Day ages ago, the third lap of the PGA Championship will do battle with the one lap of the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico. Even with neither Maximum Security nor Country House in the field, bet that more television eyeballs will be trained on Old Hilltop than Bethpage Black, at least for a couple of minutes.

On Sunday, during the final round, the speedsters at Indianapolis will be deciding the pole position for the following week's 500-Mile Race and International Sweepstakes. One car at a time isn't quite the attraction as 33 barreling into the first turn at once or as many horses as their owners see fit to go to the post, but it's one more attraction to cause a PGA-related distraction.

Throw in the ever-present pennant races, and

CBS brass have to be hoping Woods, chasing Jack Nicklaus' majors record and his own high standards, opens 66-67 or something close to that, and arrives on the first page of the leader board. With Dustin and Phil and Rickie and Brooks and Rory and the other usual suspects stapled to it as well.

Oh, and Sergio too. The last time the pros visited Bethpage Black, the New York crowd baited Garcia mercilessly for his endless gripping and regripping of the club. He long ago stopped that, plus won a Masters, so perhaps the reprobates who often populate a Big Apple gallery will pick on someone else. Or perhaps they won't be drinking. That may be asking too much.

Perhaps we are completely in the wrong and both the galleries and the television audience will be immense for this week's adventure in Long Island. We wish for that, as the PGA is a grand old scrap, with every notable but Arnold Palmer having won it.

Last year's 100th edition at Bellerive Country Club in Town and Country, Mo., one of the ritzy western suburbs of St. Louis, was well-attended and provided considerable drama when Koepka was challenged by Woods on Sunday afternoon. Anyone who was there still hears the echoes of the gallery's roar when Woods stuck it close on the ninth hole with a typically impossible approach.

Similar achievements would undoubtedly be met with similar decibel levels this time around. But so far, around water coolers and in everyday media, the silence is deafening.

5TH U.S. WOMEN'S AMATEUR FOUR-BALL

Furtney, Shepherd gain glory

South Elgin teen teams with Hoosier for USGA title

BY TIM CRONIN

In every champion's round, there's a shot that, upon looking back, can be said to either have made the difference in a close outcome or the springboard to eventual success.

For 18-year-old Megan Furtney of South Elgin, partner with Erica Shepherd of Greenwood, Ind., for the second straight year in the 5th U.S. Women's Four-Ball Championship, that shot came early in their Wed., May 1, championship match against a pair of Floridians, Jullian Bourdage and Casey Weidenfeld.

Furtney had driven her tee shot into a fairway bunker on the second hole of the match at Timuquana Country Club in Jacksonville, Fla. She and Shepherd, who will be teammates at Duke starting in the fall, were already 1-down to Bourdage and Weidenfeld in the 18-hole match. Shepherd was in good shape, but Furtney is nothing if not aggressive.

Despite standing in the sand, she saw an op-

"I kind of like to hit a high draw into greens," Furtney explained. "Both those (on Nos. 2 and 3) were tucked left. I went up one club and I knew if I caught it a little bit thin and just got it up high, it would be tight."

Before you could say "Kids these days," Furtney lashed at the ball and, true to her word, it came down tight. She converted the birdie to square the match, then hit a similar shot from the fairway on No. 3 near the pin, ran that birdie down, and like that, she and Shepherd were 1-up.

They would not trail the rest of the day, eventually scoring a 2 and 1 victory. The title match was the capper on a week that saw them never trail until that first hole of the final argument.

Seldom has a USGA match play championship been so dominated, but Furtney, who preps at St. Charles North, and Shepherd, the 2017 U.S. Girls Junior winner, are wise beyond their years. They both know how to play, and do so as a team.

"I like to hit first every time so Megan can just kind of plan based on where I go, if she needs to play safe or if she can attack. I think that's benefitted us this week," Shepherd said after winning their opening match.

The ham-and-egg approach, buttressed by positive mental attitude, worked brilliantly.

"I think if one of us isn't having our best ball striking day, just to be there for mental and emotional support for your partner and be on the greens with them and tell them that they got it before every shot, I think that that can be just as helpful as sticking it inside 10 feet," Shepherd said.

"I've said it before and I'll say it a hundred more times," Furtney said after the title match. "We know each other's games so well and we're so good about communicating with each other on the golf course. I think we're one of the few teams who didn't use caddies this week.

"I like to say that we caddie for each other in a sense. Being able to talk shots through and have a lot of options open is really important for us as a team."

That approach proved vital in the quarterfinals, when they needed an extra hole to subdue Caroline Curtis and Ashley Gilliam. Otherwise, their margins were less harrowing. Such as the morning semifinal, a 4 and 3 outcome over Alexa Pano and Amari Avery. That allowed Shepherd to grab a nap while Bourdage and Weidenfeld needed 20 holes to advance to the final match.

If the morning overtime didn't wear the high-school duo from Pembroke Pines, Fla., down, the relentless play of Furtney and Shepherd did.

"We tried our best to keep up," Weidenfeld conceded. "I mean, we got all the way to 17, so I guess we did well."

Furtney has played since she was a pre-teen. At 11, she was easy to find. Just look at the Illinois Junior Golf Association rankings. She was there often, and also won a first round match of the 2012 Illinois Women's Amateur at Ravisloe, showing the adults she was not to be trifled with.

By 2015, she won an AJGA tournament in Deerfield – the first of three in two years – and began a four-year run as one of the key cogs on the St. Charles North squad, taking fifth place in the IHSA's Class AA Championship as a freshman, tying for eighth as a junior and tying for third as a senior last fall. In 2016, she made it to the second round of the U.S. Girls Junior before medalist Hye-Jin Choi beat her.

Then a not so funny thing happened. Trying to slide her chair closer to the dinner table in May 2017, she somehow cut off the tip of her left pinkie finger because of a loose table leg screw.

Surgery followed surgery, Furtney all the while wondering if she would play golf again. The doctors said she could still grip a club, but how well? Only she could determine that.

Finally, she had a club in her hand. And the ball went where it was supposed to. Pinkie, shminkie. She could still play. Quickly, she jumped back into the AJGA national rankings. Duke took note of that and her dazzling GPA – 5.27 as a senior.

She first teamed with future fellow Dookie Shepherd for last year's Four-Ball, shooting a dazzling 61 in qualifying and then advancing to the semifinals before falling to eventual champions Katrina Prendergast of Nevada and Ellen Seccor of Oregon. That loss wasn't forgotten.

"We're seeking revenge this year," said Shepherd, who was 23rd in the Augusta National Women's Amateur. "Keep on playing for revenge."

That worked. Everything worked. Furtney and Shepherd have this golf thing figured out.

Meanwhile, Furtney's been able to enjoy real teen life as well. She got time off from school to play in the Four-Ball, but made sure she was back for St. Charles North's senior prom on Kentucky Derby Saturday. Then it was back to golf.

"I think me and Megan are going to take advantage of our last junior golf summer," Shepherd said.

As they have their spring.

68TH ILLINOIS PGA MATCH PLAY

Once more with feeling

Top seed Chaussard repeats at Kemper Lakes

BY TIM CRONIN
REPORTING FROM KILDEER

Garrett Chaussard had good reason to want to repeat as Illinois PGA Match Play champion at Kemper Lakes Golf Club.

He has another mouth to feed. The Chaussard family grew with the addition of Marie three months ago, and since then, said Chaussard, “I haven’t played much golf.”

A diaper dandy will scramble anyone’s schedule, but you couldn’t tell it by the way Chaussard, a teaching pro at Skokie Country Club, mowed through the field on Thur., May 8, to annex his second straight title in the section’s 68th match play soiree. His toughest test, fittingly, came in the championship match, where Brian Carroll took him to the 17th green before falling 2 and 1.

Each threw everything at the other. Only the second, 15th and 17th holes were halved. The lead went back and forth. Chaussard was 2 up at the turn and 1 down after 12 holes with Carroll, the head pro at Royal Hawk in St. Charles, charging.

Then came the shot of the match, and Chaussard authored it on the par-3 13th, which played 177 yards with a helping crosswind in the clammy, overcast 61-degree weather.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

DOUBLING UP Smooth-swinging Garrett Chaussard drills a tee shot on the seventh hole of Kemper Lakes during the final match of the Illinois PGA Match Play Championship.

Chaussard pulled a 6-iron, but not any 6-iron. This was, he explained, “a chip 6-iron.”

How does that work? Take a three-quarter backswing, come through the ball just so, and watch it turn ever-so-gently right-to-left and land ever so softly about 16 inches from the pin.

“It was a little guessing,” Chaussard admitted. “I was fortunate I’d played it earlier in the day. I hit a 6-iron a little bit harder the first time around. I had a reference for the second time, and the wind wasn’t quite as hard the second time, so I didn’t hit it quite as hard, but basically hit the same shot.”

That squared the match, the fifth time one of the contestants had done so. Chaussard’s 8-foot birdie putt on the par-4 14th moved him 1 up for the fifth time. Carroll kept pace on the par-5 15th with a 20-foot par-saving putt, but his fairway bunker-induced bogey on the par-4 16th advanced Chaussard to dormie 2. Matching pars on the par-3 17th, where the pin was in the same spot it was for the final round of the 1989 PGA Championship, finished things off.

Chaussard was 1-under, including the usual concessions, across 17 holes, after playing 14 holes in 4-under in dispensing of Dakun Chang, 6 and 5, in the morning. Carroll was 1-over in the final match, with four birdies to Chaussard’s three.

“It was a good match, a lot of back and forth,” Carroll said. “It’s the most birdies I made in any of my matches. Most of them, I made par all day long and that’s usually good enough out here in these conditions.

“I feel better about my golf game this week than last week,” Carroll added. He had missed the cut in last week’s national club pro championship. His rally after being 2 down the turn, including birdies on the 11th and 12th holes, showed his polish.

“Two down is a number you can make up in match play,” Carroll said. “Once you get that first hole, and you’re only one down, then it just feels like it’s a close match and any one shot can get you back even. I just had to stop three-putting.”

He did, and the game was afoot. Each was 1-under on the eight holes they played on the back.

“He hit two really good shots in on 11 and 12,” Chaussard said.

Chaussard, who won approximately $5,000, if his victory in 2018 is any indication, for his toil over the week, is the sixth player to win two or more IPGA Match Play titles in succession. Studying the trophy, he noted Curtis Malm, the head pro at White Eagle, had won three straight from 2012-2014. But one panel on the trophy is missing, so the real target for Chaussard, at least if he three-peats in 2020, is Bob Harris. The Illinois Golf Hall of Fame member and longtime Sunset Ridge pro scored six straight IPGA Match Play titles from 1958-1963, and lost in the final match the next two years.

“With as little golf as I’ve played, I’m pretty surprised to come out and strike the ball as well as I did,” Chaussard said. “I was able to get into good rhythms in each match. Just kind of go through the process, as cliche as that sounds.”

It’s Carroll’s highest placing in the tournament. With a first round bye similar to Chaussard’s, Carroll had beaten Hans Larson, 6 and 5; Mike Haase, 6 and 4; Frank Hohenadel, 2 and 1; quarterfinalist Eric Ilic, 5 and 4; and semifinalist Travis Johns, 5 and 4.

Chaussard, as the holder, was awarded the No. 1 seed, a departure from previous procedure using the Illinois PGA’s point system, and one that harkens back to an earlier day in golf. His road to the title included a 5 and 3 victory over Brian Vaisnoras, a 4 and 3 success against Julian Thompson, a 3 and 1 win over Steve Gillie, a 2 and 1 quarterfinal victory over Matt Slowinski, and the aforementioned rout of Chang.

The top of the field is seeded according to the Illinois PGA’s point system, aside from last year’s winner. With Johns, Carroll and Chang, last year’s top three players, seeded second through fourth respectively, the top four seeds advanced to the semifinals.

But Chaussard was fifth in the standings last year, behind No. 4 Chris Green, so the 1-2-3-5 players in the previous year’s standings made the Final Four. That last happened in 2007, when third-seeded Mike Small won the title. Until this year, the top seed had won only once in 13 years, when Malm, leader in the 2012 standings, won the second of his three straight in 2013.

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

THIS CLOSE Garrett Chaussard dropped his chip 6-iron to about 16 inches from the cup on the par-3 14th hole, a shot that squared the match and was the first of two straight birdies.

Dozen candidates vie for Hall honors

All gamuts of golf represented in sterling group of finalists

BY TIM CRONIN

There are 85 members in the Illinois Golf Hall of Fame.

As of the evening of May 30, there will be a handful more.

The number is unknown at the moment. That depends on how the selection committee votes after considering the merits of a dozen finalists, some well-known and others less so, but all having survived from an original field of 31 for the biennially-awarded honor during an afternoon-long discussion in April.

The 18th induction ceremony takes place at The Glen Club on Oct. 18.

The dazzling dozen the committee will select from includes players, an architect, visionaries and administrators, a caddie mentor and a reporter. The group spans virtually the entire history of the game in the state, from the late 1800s to the present day.

The 12 candidates, presented alphabetically:

Bessie Anthony

Nearly forgotten today, Bessie Anthony dominated American women's amateur golf during her short career at the beginning of the 20th century. A product of the Glen View Club's early years, she won the first three Women's Western Amateurs and the 1903 U.S. Women's Amateur, after which she retired.

Emil Esposito

Emil Esposito parlayed a fine amateur record

Tim Cronin / Illinois Golfer

into a 50-year-plus career as a golf professional, following in the footsteps of his father. One of the first pros to produce a golf instruction video, he won the Illinois Open twice (1966-74) and collected a memorable title in the 1979 Illinois PGA Championship, the first to be held at Kemper Lakes. That led Jim Kemper to hire him away from Mount Prospect Golf Course and to a three-decade career with KemperSports' golf division.

Randy Kane

Randy Kane was nicknamed "The Family Doctor" for his close attention to the turf quality of the Chicago District Golf Association's courses. With a doctorate in plant pathology from Cornell, Kane served as the CDGA's first director of turfgrass programs from 1985 through 2006, and was a leader in identifying problems and passing the solutions to some 400 clubs in the CDGA universe.

Greg Kunkel

The caddie master at Sunset Ridge Country Club since 1987, the immensely-popular Greg Kunkel is both a developer of young people as caddies and adults, and a fine caddie himself, with two Illinois Open winners on his watch, among other achievements.

William Langford

A leading golf architect long after his playing days, Chicago native William Langford was co-creator with partner Theodore Moreau of several distinguished courses, including Lawsonia Links in Wisconsin, Wakonda in Iowa, Butterfield in the Chicago area and Kankakee Elks downstate. He was a founding member and twice president of the American Society of Golf Course Architects, and a leader in public golf through the USGA, and refining the course rating system.

Carol Mann

Educated in golf at Olympia Fields Country Club, Carol Mann became one of the foremost players of her time. After turning pro before her calendar hit 20, would go on to win 38 LPGA Tour tournaments, including a pair of majors, the 1964 Women's Western Open and the 1965 U.S. Women's Open. Behind the scenes, Mann was president of the LPGA when it hired its first commissioner, and was the first woman to be a regular TV commentator, notably at NBC. Mann is already a member of the World Golf Hall of Fame, inducted in 1977.

Michael Miller

A consensus-builder, Michael Miller built the stature of the section and of area golf in general over 20 years as the Illinois PGA's executive director. He helped create the Illinois PGA Foundation, attracted corporate sponsors for the section's championships, including the Illinois Open, and boosted the visibility of the Hall of Fame through permanent exhibits at The Glen Club. In his time, the section created the Youth Skills Challenge for the 2006 PGA Championship, which evolved into the Drive, Chip and Putt Championship.

Francis Peabody

A century-ago philanthropist who built his fortune in coal and found his escape in golf, Francis Peabody convinced the leaders at Chicago's private clubs to unite to organize tournaments and for the welfare of caddies, prompting the formation of the Chicago District Golf Association in the fall of 1914.

Gary Pinns

Gary Pinns is the only person to win the Illinois Open five times, doing so across three decades, with the first title in 1978 as an amateur. He then turned professional and captured three more in the 1980s, and the last in 1990. He was also all-ACC at Wake Forest for two years while the team's captain on a squad that included Gary Hallberg, Scott Hoch and Robert Wrenn. Pinns doesn't play much these days, but has become an accomplished teacher, holding forth at Oak Brook Golf Club, the municipal course adjacent to Butler National.

Harry Radix

More than just golf's No. 1 fan, Harry Radix created the pro tour's original ranking system in 1934 and donated the trophy for the circuit's player of the year. Eventually supplanted by the Vardon Trophy, Radix remained close to the game, and the Radix Cup Match was created to honor him. One of the few to get close to Ben Hogan, Radix was a supporter of golf locally and nationally, and a world-recognized notable in figure skating.

Dave Ryan

Downstate Taylorville's Dave Ryan has built a formidable resume in senior amateur golf. His victory in the 2016 U.S. Senior Amateur is the capstone, so far, in a career including four Illinois Senior Amateur titles and seven times senior player of the year awards in eight years. He would be the second leading amateur from Taylorville to make the hall, following multiple Illinois Amateur winner James Frisina.

Len Ziehm

Rare has been the area tournament Len Ziehm has not reported on since 1968, when he covered the Western Open. Spending the bulk of his career at the Chicago Sun-Times, he became known for the depth of his local coverage, as well as weekly reviews of public courses in era when newspapers had space for them, and continues to report for the Daily Herald, Illinois Golfer, and his own website.

There would have been 13 finalists, but in what is believed to be a first, one finalist withdrew after he was informed of his status. Mike Keiser, a fan of classic golf architecture and a behind-the-scenes philanthropist, didn't want to be considered.

Keiser would likely have been a shoo-in, given he's encouraged the game's return to natural links settings more than any other course operator since World War II. His vision for those settings led to Bandon Dunes in Oregon, Cabot Links in Nova Scotia, and Sand Valley in central Wisconsin, all open to the public. He's also been generous to the Evans Scholars Foundation and other charities.

Illinois men annex Big Ten again

Fifth straight and 10th in 11 for team, led by co-medalist de Chassart

BY TIM CRONIN

It's almost assumed now when spring rolls around in Champaign and Urbana. Another desultory Illinois men's basketball season is over, another disastrous football season looms, but there's a bright spot. The Fighting Illini men's golf team will bag bundles of birdies and Big Ten boodle.

The Illini had been runner-up or worse in tournaments since the calendar turned. They were considered the nominal favorite at the Big Ten Championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club's Wissahickon Course in Flowertown, Pa., mostly on reputation – 24th in the national ranking – the way a horse in a stakes race would get the nod on past performances.

The oddsmakers were right. Illinois won the title for the fifth straight time and 10th time in 11 years, scoring a team total of 2-under 278 in the final round to finish at 28-over 868 for the three-round weekend, beating Purdue by five strokes and Michigan State by 25.

What's more, and more amazingly, Illinois freshman Adrien Dumont de Chassart poured home a passel of birdies in the final round, his 4-under 66 lifting him to 2-over 212 for the weekend and a tie for first in the individual race. There's no playoff in Big Ten play, so he shared the top spot with Angus Flanagan of Minnesota, marking the ninth straight season an Illini player has won or shared the title. You could have gotten great odds in Las Vegas on two guys named Adrien and Angus sharing a conference title.

"A 66 in the last round of a tournament always gives you a chance, and for Adrien to win this as a freshman speaks volumes for his potential and future," Illini coach Mike Small said.

Small's squad won the title despite having no seniors – Nick Hardy and Dylan Meyer are a year out the door – though junior Giovanna Tadiotto reeled in a final-round 68 for 6-over 216 to jump into seventh. Sophomore Varun Chopra's 75 for 220 (tied for 11th) and junior Michael Feagles' 69 for 221 (tied for 16th) rounded out the four scores that counted. Bryan Baumgarten, the fifth Illini on the trip, scored 78-80-80, his 28-over 238 tying for 63rd and well off the pace.

"As coaches, we are very proud that this team took a step this week and closed out a last round of a significant tournament," Small said. "We finished second all spring and haven't put a round together when we needed it. I'm very proud of the team today for bringing the mindset of winning a championship to a pressure situation."

Small made a change for the regional, putting Tommy Kuhl in the five-man lineup in place of Baumgarten.

Winning the conference gonfalon automatically advanced Illinois into the NCAA Tournament. The Illini were assigned to the regional at TPC Myrtle Beach in Murrells Inlet, S.C., beginning Mon., May 13. Five teams from each of six regionals, and the top player on a non-advancing team, go to the NCAA Championship at Blessings Golf Club in Fayetteville, Ark., May 24-29.

Illinois and Minnesota were tied for first entering the final round at 30-over 590, with Purdue a stroke behind. The Gophers, aside from Flanagan (even par 70), blew up in the final round. Michigan's Charlie Pilon fired 69 for 213 and solo third.

Northwestern finished 13 in the 14-school field at 62-over 902, with David Nyfjall the highest-finishing Wildcat, tying for 19th with a final-round 70 for 10-over 220.

Women's golf is a week ahead in the calendar, and Illinois' women's team qualified as a unit for NCAA Championship the first time, finishing fifth at the regional at Forest Akers West Golf Course in East Lansing, Mich. Freshman Kornkamol Sukaree and junior Tristyn Nowlin, last year's Women's Western Amateur runner-up, were the team leaders with scores of even-par 216 and 1-over 217, respectively.

Northwestern's women's team also advanced, led by junior Brooke Riley's course record of 7-under 65 at Tumble Creek Golf Club in Cle Elum, Wash. Northwestern took second when the NCAA Championship was played at Rich Harvest Farms in 2016. This year's championship is at Blessings Golf Course in Fayetteville, Ark., beginning Wed., May 16.

Evans Scholars Invite set for Glen Club

The Evans Scholars Invitational, slated for The Glen Club from May 23-26, isn't the first Web .com Tour tournament to come to the Chicago area. It isn't even the first one to anchor at the course in Glenview. The CDGA-backed LaSalle Bank Chicago Open was there for three years from 2003-05.

But the ESI is the first to be sponsored by and for which proceeds will benefit the Evans Scholars Foundation, the caddies-to-college concept dreamed up by Chick Evans in the 1920s. The program, closing in on its goal of having 1,000 caddie-scholars in major universities at one time, has nearly 11,000 graduates.

The BMW Championship, set for Medinah Country Club's No. 3 course in August, is the big on-course fundraiser. Officials hope the ESI will bring in some money, but also some attention.

Admission will be free thanks to the Edward Jones brokerage firm kicking in financial banking, so anyone can roll up to the nearby parking and stroll in for free. They will see the players of the PGA Tour's stepping-stone circuit scrapping for a $99,000 first prize from the purse of $550,000.

The Western Golf Association has a four-year deal with the PGA Tour for the tournament.

"It allows us to get some additional exposure for the scholarship and our organization," WGA championship director Chris Montagano said. "We jumped on board right away and partnered with The Glen Club. It's a great spot and people seem to be excited."

The ESI essentially replaces the unrelated Rust-Oleum Championship on the tour's schedule. It was played the week before the U.S. Open at the Ivanhoe Club the last three years.

Former Illinois standout Dylan Meyer is in the field. After making six PGA Tour cuts last season, including a tie for 20th in the U.S. Open, Meyer is fighting to make a living on the Web.com Tour, where birdie is the magic word.

"Hard, firm, and fast. I love that," Meyer said of his course preference. "It eliminates half the field and they're all complaining. It's a really good feeling knowing I can have confidence going into events like that."

"Out here on the Web it's a little different. You have to shoot at least 20-under to have a chance to win, so that's been a little bit of a different change for me to get used to it. I definitely have to be a touch more aggressive than I have been in the past."
